High Wages Held Employment Bar

Small Producers Fear Their Business Will Be 'Strangled.'

By Sidney Olson.

One by one, representatives of the Nation's biggest steel corporations filed before the Public Contracts Board yesterday to hint that they may decide present steel wages are too high.

Officials of United States Steel, Republic and Inland, appearing at the board's hearings on establishment of a minimum wage for common labor in the industry, gave the first definite indications of a possible wage slash since the recent price reductions.

"Propaganda" Charged.

The intimation came as United States Steel reported a deficit of $5,010,426 for the June quarter—biggest for this period since 1933—compared with $1,291,000 in the previous quarter and a net income of $36,173,682 in the same quarter last year.

The regular $1.75 dividend on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock was ordered paid by the directors, who noted improving demand for steel products.

Heated rebuttal was given to the charge by Philip Murray, chairman, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, that the "substandard wage structure" of Bethlehem and Republic was undermining wages in the industry.

C. A. McLain, of Bethlehem, characterized Murray's assertions as "a malicious piece of propaganda," as he struck at Murray's claim that Bethlehem maintained a minimum wage rate 6 cents below the prevailing base rate paid by its competitors.

McLain said: "Murray's testimony is designed to divert the board's attention from the facts."

Ernest S. Ballard, counsel, Inland Steel, told the board that the maintenance of high wages at static levels "in the face of present economic conditions is impossible without injury to employes and employers alike."

Fixed Wage Fought.

Ballard said:

"It is obvious in the face of recently reduced prices and certain other costs of distribution which have been assumed by members of the industry that present wage rates must be subject to adjustment to meet existing conditions. Otherwise prices must be increased in the near future if the industry is to avoid serious losses which will impair its economic position.

"The establishment of a high wage rate largely in excess of that paid in other industries will inevitably cause the prices of steel products to be out of line with other goods and consequently restrict their consumption. This will react to the detriment of any plans for increasing employment."

Ballard insisted that it was "unwise" to set a fixed minimum wage for the steel industry at the present time.

William Beye, representing U. S. Steel's subsidiaries, told the board that "wages paid by a company must be at all times set so as to permit effective competition within the same competitive field."

Republic submitted statistical data showing the corporation was paying a base rate of 62½ cents in all its Eastern plants except two, and was paying 40 cents at Birm-

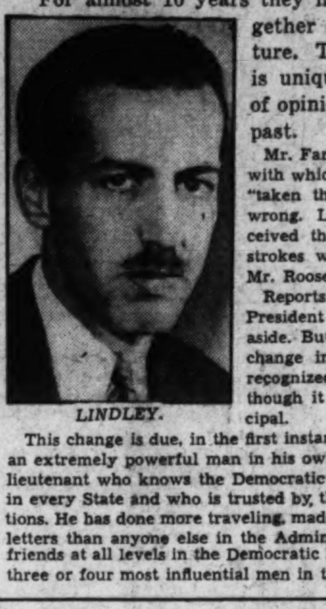
Roosevelt-Farley Relations Discussed by Ernest Lindley

Democratic Policies in 1940, and Dependence of the Two Leaders, One on the Other, Are Examined by The Washington Post's New Columnist.

By Ernest Lindley.

THE KEY to much that is puzzling in the political maneuvering centering around the White House lies in the relationship between the President and James A. Farley.

For almost 10 years they have been bound closely together in a common political venture. The debt of each to the other is unique. They have differences of opinion, as they have had in the past.



LINDLEY.

Mr. Farley has executed many decisions with which he has disagreed and has often "taken the rap" when things have gone wrong. Likewise he sometimes has received the credit for successful political strokes which originated in the mind of Mr. Roosevelt.

Reports of serious rifts between the President and Mr. Farley may be brushed aside. But that there has been a gradual change in relationship between them is recognized by the friends of both—even though it is not admitted by either principal.

This change is due, in the first instance, to Mr. Farley's emergence as an extremely powerful man in his own right. He is the only Roosevelt lieutenant who knows the Democratic organization from top to bottom in every State and who is trusted by the practical politicians of all factions. He has done more traveling, made more speeches, and signed more letters than anyone else in the Administration. He has made personal friends at all levels in the Democratic hierarchy. Today he is one of the three or four most influential men in the party.

No Doubt of His Loyalty.

About Mr. Farley's loyalty to Mr. Roosevelt there is no doubt. His code requires devotion to the leadership of the party. Officially he has favored whatever the President wanted in the way of a legislative program, and there is no reason to suppose that he will change his attitude during the remainder of Mr. Roosevelt's term.

If Mr. Roosevelt were to desire a third term, Mr. Farley probably would help him try to get it. But whether Mr. Farley's code will require him to abide by Mr. Roosevelt's wishes concerning the nomination of the next Democratic candidate for President is another matter.

This is a question which Mr. Roosevelt almost certainly never has asked Mr. Farley directly, and may never ask him. For in the presence of others he has led discussion of the future of the Democratic party to a point where it seemed fitting for Mr. Farley to avow his readiness to help Mr. Roosevelt bring about the nomination of a hand-picked successor.

It is inconceivable that Mr. Roosevelt would have steered conversation to this point if he had had a frank private understanding with Mr. Farley. Mr. Farley has not yet volunteered an answer. In response to delicate inquiries from various sources he has hinted that the New Dealers who gravitate around the White House should devote themselves more intensively to making a success of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration and less to worrying about the future of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Farley has not opposed in principle Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to dislodge some of the anti-New Dealers in the party. He was, and is, ready to help unseat Senator Tydings of Maryland, and he indicated that he would "go along" with the primary campaign against Senator George of Georgia. But he has been much more philosophical than the White House political circle about occasional aberrations from the New Deal fold, and, on the other hand, he is much more zealous about conserving the strength of Democratic State and local organizations. Moreover, although he has stood apart from most of the controversies over economic and social policy, his own tendencies are known to be toward a middle-of-the-road conservatism.

If Mr. Roosevelt could muster the full energy of his chief political aide in liberalizing the Democratic Party, he would not have to rely so heavily on his less experienced aides. If the Democratic Party in Congress and in the States accurately represented Mr. Roosevelt's popular strength, it would be much more New Dealish than it now is.

In sitting astride a loose coalition, Mr. Roosevelt finds himself somewhere near the left border of the Democratic Party proper. Mr. Farley has tried to settle down in a comfortable spot near the center of the Democratic Party. The two centers—the center of the Roosevelt coalition and the center of the Democratic Party—may be brought nearer to each other by 1940. But they will not coincide.

The movement to modernize the party has begun late. As a result Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley may find themselves more interdependent in 1940 than they have ever been before. At least, such is the calculation of some of Mr. Farley's friends.

Mr. Farley does not share the apparent belief of some of the old-line Democrats that they can nominate the next Democratic Presidential candidate, write his platform, and elect him without extreme regard for Mr. Roosevelt's wishes. He is under no illusion that Mr. Roosevelt will keep his hands off the 1940 convention. Unless the whole political scene changes miraculously, it is a safe guess that Mr. Farley will insist on the nomination of a man whom Mr. Roosevelt cannot avoid supporting.

Between Mr. Roosevelt's first, second, or third choice and a nominee he could not avoid supporting there may be a great gulf. For example, Mr. Roosevelt probably would have great difficulty in withholding his blessing from Mr. Farley if Mr. Farley should appear to be acceptable to the convention.

The whole situation might be greatly simplified if, at the appropriate moment, Mr. Roosevelt should indicate that his first choice as his successor is James A. Farley. But, as Mr. Farley's friends realize, Mr. Roosevelt is not likely to say that unless he has to.

Mr. Lindley's column will appear in The Post every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

U. S. Ships May Shun Unions For Crews, Land Tells C. I. O.

Admiral Emory S. Land, of the United States Maritime Commission, has notified the C. I. O maritime unions that Government-owned ships in the merchant marine will not require their seamen to be union members.

The National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) requires all shipping companies with which it has contracts to take crews provided by the union hiring halls. For a time, the masters of the 38 Government-owned ships also got their crews from the halls, but several months ago they began getting them from the Federal shipping commissioners in the various ports. As a result the Maritime Commission's offices here and in New York were picketed.

In a letter to Thomas Ray, secretary of the New York Maritime Council (C. I. O.), Admiral Land reiterated that seamen on ships owned by the Maritime Commission "are Goverment employes," and, as such, cannot be subjected to any "racial, political, religious or union test" as a condition of employment.

Admiral Land said that final authority for the hiring and firing of seamen must be left with the master of the vessel.

The C. I. O. maritime unions have contended, since the Maritime Commission ships are leased to private operators for use in competitive trade, the seamen employed on them rightfully come under the provisions of the national labor relations act.

Sen. McAdoo Is Accused of 'ShakeDown'

Opponent Says He Takes 5 Pct. of Pay of Job Holders.

Senate Group to Meet Today on Primaries in 8 States.

By William V. Nessly.

Charges that Federal jobholders in California are being "shaken down" for 5 per cent of their salaries to help re-elect Senator William G. McAdoo, New Deal Democrat, yesterday brought to eight the number of States in which use of election funds is being studied by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

McAdoo is running with the active support of President Roosevelt.

The new charges came while talk of a third term attempt by President Roosevelt was being tossed about the Capital, with New Deal Senator Pepper, of Florida, expressing doubt that Mr. Roosevelt desires to run again, and anti-New Deal Senator Holt, of West Virginia, accusing Administration officials of fostering the third term talk in hope if "hanging on to their jobs."

The Campaign Expenditures Committee has been called into session this morning by Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, to hasten action on inquiries in States where primary elections are to be held soon.

Publication Threatened.

At the same time a warning was issued by Sheppard to Senatorial candidates who have failed to reply to the committee's questionaire regarding contributions and expenditures in their electioneering. He threatened to make public the names of candidates who fail to respond promptly.

James W. Mellen, anti-New Deal Senate candidate against McAdoo, yesterday wired Senator Sheppard: "Airmailing you charges by other Senatorial candidates that Federal jobholders being shaken down for 5 per cent of salaries to re-elect McAdoo. Also charges of irregularities by McAdoo and his old law firm in connection with Federal projects and strange association of McAdoo and alleged lobbyists on branch banking bill.

Coast Hearing Urged.

"Urge your committee come to California to clean Augean stables built by McAdoo and his political pals, so people may know true facts before August 30 primary."

The Texas chairman said the message would be placed before the committee today.

The Pepper and Holt third-term assertions were prompted, apparently, by the radio talk of Secretary of Interior Ickes Monday night, in which he challenged "reactionaries" to bring about "a situation that will result in the people being given an opportunity to vote directly on the proposition of whether or not they are for President Roosevelt and his policies."

Pepper said the real solution for the Democratic Party lay in a coalition of Western and Southern liberals to carry out Roosevelt policies, but Holt voiced belief that

Chandler's Poison A 'Bedtime Story,' Police Chief Says

Frankfort, Ky., July 26 (AP).—Gov. A. B. Chandler was in high spirits today as police and political opposition voiced differing views about the Governor being "poisoned" by water he drank in Louisville.

Police Chief John Malley, of Louisville, formerly in the Nation's secret service ranks, after investigating said:

Detective Chief Joseph Stewart, of Louisville 's police, commented:

"It is a publicity stunt. Dr. Bryan (J. W. Bryan, the physician who said there was poison in the water the Governor consumed) told me he would not go into court and swear to anything. As far as I am concerned the investigation is all washed up."

Mrs. Chandler, who has campaigned for her husband since his illness, said:

"His illness was a killing blow to us and if I'm struck dead it was no publicity stunt."

From Shackelford Miller, jr., campaign manager for Senator Barkley, whose re-nomination in the August 6 Democratic primary Chandler is opposing, came a statement that an "ice water guard and food inspector" will be on duty when Barkley speaks here Thursday.

Utility War Only Begun, Douglas Says

New Deal Program Now Enters 'Action' Phase, U. S. Bar Told.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, July 26.—The New Deal's program to break up holding companies' public utility empires into simple, geographically integral units, admittedly only "barely started," has "entered the period of action," William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, declared today in an address before the sixty-first convention of the American Bar Association.

"We mean business," said Douglas, citing the commission's move last week to force the huge Utilities Power and Light Corporation to comply with the law by limiting its operations "to a single integrated public utility system."

Douglas' brief in behalf of the New Deal's public utility program was one of many papers delivered to the convention today, as the lawyers split up into groups to hear discussions of nearly every field of activity, from automobile insurance to international law.

Neutrality Act Scored.

President Roosevelt's concept of "aggressor nations" is "inflammatory" and the 1937 neutrality act is "unneutral," according to Edwin Borchard, professor of international law at Yale University.

The fact that a Communist or Fascist nation deprives its own citizens of personal or property rights is no reason, said Freder R. Condert, of New York, for the United States to permit such a nation to injure the property or personal rights of an American living in that nation. He said America and Great Britain should act to see that their citizens are adequately compensated for the recent Mexican confiscation of oil properties.

Robert M. Cooper, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said "judicial supervision had done much to cripple the legitimate exercise of administration discretion" by various Federal regulatory bodies and warned that unless the antagonisms and conflicting interests are eliminated from "the regulatory process," the movement toward alternative methods, including social ownership will gather impetus.

U. S. Policy Defended.

Douglas, who, like Cooper, addressed the public utility law section of the association and consequently was heard by many of the country's foremost utility lawyers, devoted much of his time to an attempt to sell his audience the basic economic soundness of the Government's utility policy of "integration" as opposed to what he called "scatteration."

He said that amendments to the public utility holding company act of 1935 might appear necessary after further experience with its

10-Day Rain Ends Today; Dry Cycle In U.S. Held Over

As Washington experienced its tenth consecutive day of rain yesterday, a Weather Bureau expert predicted that the years of drought are at an end and abundant rains once more will fall upon the Nation.

That belief was expressed by J. B Kincer, chief of the bureau's climate and crop section. He said heavy rains so far this year, folowing rains in 1937, indicate that the long drought which extended from 1930 to 1936 has spent itself.

Rainfall in the District yesterday measured only three one-hundredths of an inch but broke an all time record. Never before, since the Weather Bureau has been observing, has rain fallen here 10 consecutive days.

But forecasters announced that the wet spell probably will be broken today and forecast fair and warmer weather.

Alexandrian 1st Victim Of 20-Ft. Parking Ban

Leonard Rose, of Alexandria, yesterday was the first person in the District to be convinced of violating the new traffic regulation prohibiting parking within 20 feet of the building line at intersections. Judge John P. McMahon, in Traffic Court, fined him $3.

Youth Dives 17 Floors After 11 Hrs. on Ledge

Jumps With Net Only Inches Away; Huge Throng Groans.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—In a flare-lit scene of hysterical horror, John Ward, 26, and unemployed, leaped to his death tonight from a seventeenth floor hotel ledge to which he had clung, threatening to jump, nearly 11 hours.

He had crawled out on the ledge at 10:45 a. m. (E.S.T.) and he jumped at 9:39 p. m.

His body landed on Fifty-fifth street near Fifth avenue, amid scattered screams rising from among the thousands who for hours had stood morbidly fascinated.

Many women fainted; ambulances screamed into the area to take them away.

The last of half a dozen expedients to bring Ward down safely was all but completed when, calmly and with no single outcry, he stepped from the ledge.

The police—nearly 1,000 of whom had been brought into the fashionable midtown area to aid in the rescue and in pushing back the curious—had hauled up from the street a stout net of the sort used in loading cargo.

He stood with the right foot half extending from the ledge. He poised a moment, then thrust his left foot forward, clear of the ledge, and plummeted downward.

First the body dropped head-on, then it began to spin crazily around and end over end until, with a smash, it struck a marquee.

Taxis to Pay $21 a Month For Liability

Owners to Delay Plea for Fare Rise Till Cost of Act Is Seen.

By James D. Secrest.

A mandatory liability insurance rate of $21 a month per cab, with no lower premium for blanket policies, was fixed yesterday by J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance, as the Public Utilities Commission announced regulations governing the act, which becomes effective August 29.

The rate was lower than had been anticipated on Capitol Hill when the law was enacted as testimony at House District Committee hearings indicated it might run as high as $1 a day.

While spokesmen for the taxicab industry made informal predictions that the Public Utilities Commission will be asked to allow higher zone fares to pay for the insurance, indications are that no action will be taken until the effect of the act on the industry is known.

The two sets of regulations minimize the advantage of an association of cab owners over an independent operator, although the organized taxi owners believed they had scored a victory when the present law was enacted in lieu of a more liberal Senate bill.

Explaining his failure to fix a blanket insurance policy rate, Moor said that the $21 premium was the lowest that could be fixed reasonably with protection assured the public and that the amount of work involved would be in proportion to the cabs insured.

It was understood, however, that insurance companies would not write blanket policies for District taxi companies, at least until after they had established good risk records.

British Hang 2 Arabs; General Strike Decreed

Court-Martialled Pair Are Executed at Once in Quelling Terror.

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, July 26.—Two Arabs convicted by court-martial today were hanged immediately as British authorities moved swiftly, behind heavy troop reinforcements, to stamp out terrorism spreading over the Holy Land.

The Arabs died for possessing firearms.

The Haifa blast—the most horrible incident of Palestine's long Jewish-Arab strife—touched off murder, Arson and clashes that continued today. The toll of lives in less than 36 hours of violence rose to 69 today when three men, a Jewish settler and two Arabs, were killed in a gun battle on the banks of the river Jordan.

British authorities reported that the situation, although it remained tense and crammed with the threat of more bloodshed, had been brought under control.

British troops and Palestine police remained on emergency duty at all trouble spots. They were aided by marines from the British battle cruiser Repulse, anchored at Haifa.

A tragedy was believed to have been averted today when police discovered a bomb planted in the Edison Theater in Jerusalem. Shortly before that Jewish schoolboys had filed into the theater to attend a special performance.

No Martial Law.

London, July 26 (U.P.).—The British government tonight rejected proposals for the application of martial law throughout the Holy Land

Cannibals Prefer Dark Meat, Avers White Man, Back Safe

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, July 26.—S. Dillon Ripley, 24-year-old Ornithologist for the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, said today that a white man's life among Dutch New Guinea cannibals is generally uneventful because the cannibals prefer to eat their own relatives.

He said the Karoons have "good features, brown skins and a certain amount of beauty among the young girls." But their minds, he said, are low and conniving.

"The system," he said, "results in a minimum of bores and love thieves in the tribe." Relative eating, he said, resulted in part from the Dutch government's attitude toward consumption of white men and Chinese.

"For instance, let's suppose a tribesman steals from a fellow tribesman his wife or some personal possession. The victim lodges a complaint with the chief and the chief calls a council of assistant chiefs and priests. If they decide the meat shortage is acute enough to warrant drastic punishment, the offender is invited to a big blow-out.

"He doesn't know he is about to be barbequed. He dances with the rest of them.

"When the dancing ends, the unfortunate is killed.

"The guests then roast him to individual taste."

Chamberlain Denies Policy Pushes Czechs To Surrender

Dodges Question Of U. S. War Debt

Says Sudeten Mediation May Be Alternative To General War.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 26.—Prime Minister Chamberlain was subjected to a running fire in Commons today on his safety-first policy in Czechoslovakia and Spain, and his failure thus far to put over an Anglo-American trade pact and settle the British war debt to the United States.

The occasion for all this criticism, chiefly from Liberals and Laborites, was the last foreign affairs debate prior to adjournment Friday for a three-month rest from worrying and talking about the awful state of Europe.

Seemingly puzzled and hurt to be the butt of so much criticism when, as he said, he was doing his best to preserve peace, Chamberlain attempted a vigorous defense of his foreign policy on both sides of the Atlantic. He denied his government was "hustling" Czechoslovakia into granting further concessions to the Sudeten Germans. The contrary was true, he said, the British being anxious to prevent Prague being "too hasty" and precipitating a dangerous deadlock with the Sudetens.

As for Spain, Chamberlain insisted both Italy and Britain had lived up to the Anglo-Italian accord of last Easter and he looked forward to the day when foreign volunteers would be withdrawn from Spain.

Holds U. S. Relations Good.

The war debt issue had been brought forward by the Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, who described it as a "festering sore" in Anglo-American relations which should be "cauterized." He said the Chamberlain government was fooling itself if it thought the debt question counted for nothing in the minds of the American people.

Chamberlain replied that he didn't understand the remark about cauterization: At any rate, he added caustically, it could not apply only to the British and was a two-sided matter. He said his government's attitude had recently been made "perfectly plain" in the House of Lords and there was no more to say.

Agreeing with Sinclair on the high value Britain should attach to her relations with the United States, Chamberlain observed complacently: "I am glad to think they have never been better than they are at present."

Defends Mussolini.

The lagging negotiations for an Anglo-American trade pact to lower tariff walls were described by the prime minister as an attempt to demonstrate the possibility of "these two great countries working together on a subject which, if they can come to terms, may prove to be the forerunner of a policy of wider application."

He continued:

"We have gone through an enormous schedule of articles and have agreed upon a certain part of it, but we have come now to certain instances which offer exceptional difficulties and they are not yet entirely resolved. There is good will on both sides and I hope we shall not have to wait too long before we can announce that we have finally come to an agreement."

Among the back-benchers who listened intently to Chamberlain was his former foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, who resigned after quarreling with Chamberlain over the latter's attitude toward Premier Mussolini and the United States.

Eden made no interruptions except to join in the broad, derisive

Guffey Backs Earle War on State's Courts

Pennsylvania Senator Hints Judges Received Morgan Stock.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 26.—United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey joined Gov. Earle in attacking Pennsylvania's courts tonight as the chief executive met the first open opposition in his legislative fight against a grand jury investigation.

Guffey, arriving at the end of the second day of a special session convened by Earle, urged in a statement that the General Assembly impeach certain unnamed members of the State Supreme and Superior Courts who, he said, had accepted "the equivalent of cash from the House of Morgan."

He said the judges had received "partial gifts of stock."

Guffey Subpenaed.

Guffey, meantime, was subpenaed, Constable James Grant said, to appear August 8 before the grand jury summoned by Judge Paul N. Schaeffer. It was intimated at the district attorney's office that the summons would not interfere with a voyage to Europe Guffey plans to start in a day or two.

Gov. Earle repeatedly has assailed the State Supreme Court since it approved a grand jury inquiry of charges of blackmail and extortion for political purposes and vote coercion raised against the Governor and 13 other high-ranking Democrats during the May primary campaign.

Guffey's statement climaxed a day of legislative jockeying in which Earle won the early rounds of his battle for laws which would head off the grand jury investigation set to begin here August 8.

Cavalcante Fights Bill.

The program moved forward with little show of opposition in the House of Representatives but one Democratic senator, Anthony J. Cavalcante, administration foe, introduced in the Senate a bill aimed at a key point in the Earle grand jury quashing program.

Cavalcante said he didn't expect his bill, to prohibit the attorney general from superseding a county prosecutor, to get "very far" in the administration-controlled General Assembly.

There was no orgfianized opposition in the House but one Republican spokesman answered the Governor's speech of last night in which he outlined his reasons for summoning the lawmakers.

Guffey's statement against the judges was not made in the Legislature. He handed copies to newsmen and gave no indication of what other action, if any, he planned.

Charges Morgan Interest.

"Particular inquiry should be devoted to the donations that were made to these judges through partial gifts of stock in the United Corporation, a utility holding company controlling other utilities serving the consumers of ePnnsylvania," the statement said.

"It should be the Legislature's interesting duty to ascertain the extent of litiatgion affecting these and other Morgan-dominated utilities that was in the courts of Pennsylvania or before the Supreme Court both then and since these justices snapped up the juicy tidbits flung to them from the tables of the money changers."

Guffey claimed that "more than 50 years of uninterrupted ownership of our courts by Pennsylvania's predatory interests through the medium of the Republican Party have made these courts mere tools of these interests."

First Ward Issues Amusement Guide

An amusement guide to the historic First Ward of Washington has been issued by the First Ward Neighborhood Council. The area is bounded roughly by Constitution avenue, Fifteenth street northwest, Connecticut avenue, Kalorama road and the Potomac River.

Issued by Dr. Carl D. Wells, chairman of the council's recreation committee, the Community Baedeker, gives locations of clubs, playgrounds, museums, bicycle rental lots, riding academies, historic houses and churches.

There are no funds for mailing but copies are obtainable at the Council of Social Agencies, 1101 M street northwest, at 5 cents each.

Six members of the first Washington Rover Crew, an organization for training young men as Boy Scout executives, will leave Washington tonight to attend the Eighth Ontario Rover Scout Meet to be held at the Blue Springs Scout Reserve near Acton, Ont., July 30 to August 1.

Those making the trip under the leadership of District Scout Commissioner Richard H. Rule, are Elwood Jarnagin, Arthur Latterner, Samuel L. Holton, James Carey and Perry Doing.

Samuel J. Cabell Dies; Lawyer and Va. Farmer

Front Royal, Va., July 26.—Samuel Jordan Cabell, 70, teacher, attorney and farmer of Cedarville, Warren County, died last night in Winchester Memorial Hospital.

He was a native of Stephens City, the son of the late Dr. Henry Cabell and Mrs. Annie Cabell-Cabell. For a number of years, he taught in the public schools of the Shenandoah Valley and in Capt. S. M. McDonald's former school for young men in Berryville. He also practiced law in Berryville. For the last 30 years he engaged in farming.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Virginia LeHew Cabell, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Miller Jett of Warren County and a brother, Charles Cabell, of Cedarville.

L. M. Young Leads 1,500 Elks in Charitable And Community Welfare Work in Capital

Liberal Contributions Made to Many Projects.

By Christine Sadler

Harris & Ewing.

L. MARTIN YOUNG.

While not a charitable nor a community welfare organization in the strictest sense of those words, Washington Lodge, No. 15, of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, has proved its interest in worth-while community projects by contributing liberally.

"Charity is placed first among virtues which the Elks are solemnly obligated to practice and venerate," points out L. M. Young, exalted ruler of the lodge, members of which number almost 1,500.

A comprehensive report of the relief and social welfare work furthered by the lodge from 1913 through 1937 was made recently by Secretary William S. Shelby, who showed that "neither race nor creed intruded as a factor in determining our action."

During those 24 years approximately $150,000 was distributed by the lodge. Nearly 60 per cent of the whole went to direct relief to its own members. The rest of the list included such figures as: Children's Hospital, $5,400; flood and disaster relief, American Red Cross, $875; war relief, American Red Cross, $350; Boy Scouts of America, $250; Catholic Charities, $185; Associated Charities, $703; Providence Hospital, $450; Salvation Army, $827; United Hosptial Appeal, $165; Warm Spring Foundation, $600.

The Washington Lodge operates in the distribution of relief through two main committees—the standing relief committee and the social and community welfare committee. The committees are vested with full power to deal immediately with usual requests for aid, and individual file cards are kept confidential.

Entire proceeds from the annual charity ball and from the weekly dances are used exclusively for relief and community welfare purposes.

Exalted Ruler Young calls attention to the work done through the Boys Band of the lodge. "We are justly proud of our band. It is composed of 60-odd young boys and it recently won first prize at our national meeting.

"Some of the boys grow up to become Elks, but that is not the primary purpose of the band, which offers good musical training and a form of entertainment for the boys who belong to it. Many boys who received their first musical training with us now have good musical positions," he says.

On Friday—R. J. A. Kaemmerer, president of the local Optimist Club, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Pittman Declares Note to Mexico Is Warning to World

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said yesterday he believed that the course of this country's world trade might be profoundly affected by the controversy with Mexico over property seizures.

Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the United States could not permit the situation of go unchallenged because it would tend to "weaken, if not destroy, the rights of our citizens under treaties of amity and commerce throughout the world."

For that reason, Pittman said, he regarded Secretary Hull's note on land seizures as not only a warning to Mexico, but a notice to all other governments that this country will not permit confiscation of American-owned property abroad.

2 U. S. Cutters Refloat Brazilian Cadet Ship

By the Associated Press.

The Brazilian training ship Almirante Saldanha was refloated late yesterday and towed into the harbor of San Juan, Puerto Rico, 22 hours after it went aground on nearby Cabras Shoals, by the cutters Marion and Unalca, the Coast Guard reported last night.

Most of the crew of 377 were removed earlier.

Total yearly pay increases for 700 employes in Government cafeterias operated by the Welfare and Recreational Association will amount to more than $65,000, it was disclosed yesterday with announcement of the signing of an employe-management working contract.

The signing of the contract ended two months of negotiation. The increase, coupled with another earlier this year while the United Cafeteria Employes Union 471 (C. I. O.) was negotiating with the Welfare Association, brings the total annual wage increase to approximately 15 per cent, Jack Mink, the union's business representative, said.

Under the terms, each cafeteria worker will receive 12 days' annual leave with pay. The contract calls for a 48-hour week and time and a half for overtime. All employes will be classified with minimum hourly rates of pay, as follows:

Head cooks and head bakers, 55 cents; cooks and bakers below rating of "head," salad makers, dessert makers and kitchen men, 50 cents; dish and glass washers, storeroom porters, head bus employes, soda fountain employes, counter attendants, truck drivers, waiters and waitresses who do not receive tips, 42½ cents. Part-time employes will receive 5 cents an hour above the minimum rates.

U. S. Consul Starts Trying to Get Jews Out of Nazi Camps

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—The United States' official refugee observer arrived here today and started work on an assignment which German official sources believed would involve the first attempt to win freedom for Jews in concentration camps.

The observer, George Brandt, a consul in the American foreign service, spent a large part of the day conferring with Ambassador Hugh Wilson.

Reich officials seemed disposed to free the Jews, provided they first obtain foreign immigration visas.

London, July 26 (U.P.).—Eddie Cantor announced today that he had collected during a fortnight's visit in Britain more than $500,000 to transfer Jewish children from Germany, Austria and Poland to Palestine. Cantor will sail for New York tomorrow on the Normandie.

Wage Cut Blocked, RailLaborite Holds

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—A. F. Whitney, of Cleveland, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, said today the railroads' chances for a 15 per cent wage reduction were "one in a million."

Emerging from a meeting with the carriers' conference committee, Whitney said management and labor were still deadlocked. The conferences began a week ago.

H. A. Enochs, carriers' spokesman, asserted the railroads would not withdraw their demand.

Iowa Governor Refuses to Let Maytag Reopen

Des Moines, Iowa, July 26 (AP).—Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel tonight rejected a formal demand by the Maytag Co. that Iowa National Guard Troops maintaining martial law in Newton, Iowa, permit the washing machine plant to operate.

The Governor today received a demand from the company "to restore possession of the company's factory and property to it for use in any lawful manner without interference."

Newton has been under martial law since last Wednesday.

Bank to Spur U.S. Trade With South America

Expansion of Exports Now Sought to Counteract Europe's Aims.

Expansion of American trade in South American countries, especially in heavy goods products, will be encouraged by the Administration through redoubled efforts of the Export-Import Bank, which heretofore had concentrated its activities in the European field, it was learned yesterday.

Concentration of the bank's activities in South American markets involves the New Deal's desire to arrest European propaganda and trade penetration.

The disclosure last Saturday that the Export-Import Bank had agreed to discount notes of the Haitian government to finance its Public works program, estimated to require $5,000,000, is only one of a number of important transactions in which the bank will participate.

Rail Sale Negotiated.

The bank is expected to disclose soon the completion of negotiations for the sale by American railroad equipment manufacturers of a substantial order for rolling stock to Brazil.

The Haitian transaction will be consummated through an arrangement under which the export-import bank will discount notes of the Haitian government issued to the J. G. White Engineering Corporation, which wil undertake the construction of bridges and roads. A similiar arrangement will be made for the Brazilian purchases.

Unsettled political conditions in Europe, trade barriers and exchange restrictions have reduced the activities of the export-import bank. The Sino-Japanese year-old war also has curtailed its activities in the Far East, formerly a rich market for exports of American heavy goods.

Business Reviving.

South America is experiencing a business revival. Factors indicating improved financial conditions are the refunding operations which a number of countries hove consummated in this country in their dollare debt. Last week the Republic of Argentina registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission a $25,000,000 bond issue which will be floated in the United States.

Meanwhile, the Department of Commerce revealed that demand for American aircraft, mostly of the military type, increased exports for the first six months of the year 128 per cent over shipments for the corresponding period in 1937. Aeronautics products valued at $7,952,932, an all-time high for any one month, were exported in June to bring the aggregate for the year up to $37,121,659.

Shipments of all automotive products to foreign markets during the first half of the current year were valued at $162,328,340, a decrease of only 11.2 per cent from the $182,865,676 covering the corresponding months of 1937, despite the fact that factory sales from the United States plants numbered 1,205,874 during the January-June period of 1938, or 56.3 per cent below the 2,788,298 units recorded in the corresponding months of last year. The units exported in the period including the estimated number of foreign assemblies, totaled 249,953, or 21 per cent of the output.

G. O. P.'s Program Group Will Study New Deal Finance

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 26.—The Republican program committee will devote two days of its summer session next month to investigating the "existing national financial emergency," including New Deal "pump priming" activities, Chairman Dr. Glenn Frank announced tonight.

Frank said James H. Douglas, jr., Chicago, former assistant secretary of the Treasury, had marshaled a group of technically qualified business men and university specialists to lead financial "round table" discussions.

A special report on the "financial emergnecy" will be presented by a sub-committee on finance headed by Arthur Ballantine, of New York, former assistant secretary of the Treasury.

Authorities who will take part in the financial discussions include: Walter Lichtenstein, vice president First National Bank, Chicago; Harry D. Gidhowse, professor of economics, Columbia University; Melchoir Palyi, former economic advisor to the Deutsche Bank; E. S. Pillsbury, president of the Century Electric Co., St Louis, Mo., Edward S. Mason, Harvard professor of economics; James W. Bell, head of the department of finance, school of commerce, Northwestern University; C. H. Crennan economist of the Continental Illinois National Bank, Chicago, Henry C. Simons, associate professor of economics, University of Chicago.

Waycross, Ga., July 26 (AP).—Weeping bitterly, Harvey Nelson confessed to a murder trial jury today he had a part in a plot to kill his 12-year-old son for a $900 insurance policy, but blamed the actual shooting on one of two pretty waitresses who, he said, "drew matches to see who would do it."

The 35-year-old roadhouse operator said he had been under the influence of his blonde and brunette employes, Verna Mae Fowelr and Mary Kent, both under 20.

Loyalists Turn On Franco, Cut 12-Mile Wedge

By the Associated Press.

With Loyalist Army on the Ebro River, July 26.—The government offensive in northeastern Spain today drove a wedge 12 miles deep into insurgent ground.

Their advance guard tonight passed that town, insurgent military headquarters in the region, without attempting to occupy the city.

Three Towns Recaptured.

Gandesa was the scene of a government defeat April 2, when the insurgents were thrusting their salient to the eastern coast to cut Catalonia off from the rest of government Spain.

Ltae reports from Barcelona said the Catalonian forces under the banners of the republic recaptured the towns of Villalba de Los Arcos and Forbera.

Government bulletins said the insurgents were rushing troops and artillery into the threatened area from the Lerida and Balaguer sectors of the Catalonian front.

May Prolong War.

The Catalonian armies were reported gaining ground as fast as government forces had lost it on the Estremadura front of southwestern Spain to a surprise offensive by the insurgents.

At the same time government advices told of bitter combat northeast and west of Viver, on the Teruel-Sagunto road, where insurgent Gen's. Garcia Valino and Jose Varela strained all resources to smash the government barrier to their drive toward Valencia, 34 miles to the southeast.

Insurgent reports declared Barcelona's attempt to harass Franco by the series of piercing assaults across the Ebro River had failed. It seemed, however, that the government had driven ahead in a manner likely to prolong the war.

Insurgents Trapped.

Fighting raged all along the Ebro front, stretching some 90 miles inland and north from the delta town, Amposta. Government forces reported capture of an entire insurgent battalion with its supporting batteries of Italian artillery after one crossing.

On the delta end of the front, a strong force of insurgents was reported trapped within a triangle formed by the mouth of the Ebro, Amposta and San Carlos de la Rapita. The government unlimbered heavy guns in this sector to shell the Barcelona-Valencia Railway between Tortosa and Vinaroz.

The insurgents admitted that "a few companies" of Catalonian soldiers had crossed the Ebro but said these and the bridges they had used had been bombed by 50 large planes and heavily shelled.

Air Batteries Rushed.

The Barcelona war ministry ordered several anti-aircraft batteries rushed to the Ebro line to protect the offensive from Franco's squadrons.

Bombers shuttled bck and forth throughout the day, unloading tons of heavy explosives on the shock troops that crossed the Ebro. Insurgent ibservers said 15 brigades of government troops were blocked from crossing when insurgent batteries shelled bridgeheads.

President Greets N.Y. Friends From Galapagos Haven

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, in Galapagos Archcipelago, July 26 (AP).—From far away Galapagos Islands, President Roosevelt today sent greetings to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., neighbors who celebrated the 150th anniversary of New York's ratification of the Constitution.

"On this, the actual 150th anniversary of the ratification of the Constitution by the State of New York at Poughkeepsie," the President said, "I send my greetings.

"It is interesting to reflect that the lineal successor of the first President elected under the Constitution sends this instantaneous message to his home county from a United States warship at a point in the Galapagos Islands, in the Pacific Ocean, exactly 12 miles south of the Equator.

"I hope to be with you all in September at the time of the official celebration."

The Houston anchored tonight in Elizabeth Bay, picturesque cove of Albemarle Island, and the President found time for two hours of fishing. All members of his party made excellent catches.

Ice Cart Ride a Jest, No Spree, Giffin Tells His Court-Martial

Lieutenant Who Wanted Him to Appear Drunk Often Supported Him When It Wasn't Needed, He Testifies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Lieut. Col. Stewart S. Giffin, of the Coast Artillery, testified today at his court-martial that Lieut. James O. Smith, jr., his chief accuser, threatened to sue him unless Giffin paid him money.

Giffin quoted the lieutenant as telling him later, "Maybe I can't sue you, but I can do something else—I can tell the inspector about some things you would not like known—you know you're a drinking man."

Giffin is being tried on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Giffin, who has a record of nearly 30 years' service, testified he had indorsed a note for Smith when the lieutenant was hard pressed financially. He said Smith had asked him to enter a business deal with him and had been annoyed by his refusal.

Giffin testified for nearly two and a half hours. He said he took a drink occasionally, but denied he was intoxicated on any of the occaions mentioned in the specifications against him.

Regarding the charge that he once mounted the seat of an ice wagon and attempted to drive away, he said it was only in jest.

Giffin said Smith made a practice of grabbing his arm at parties as if he needed assistance—"especially if there was a crowd around."

The colonel said his first contact with Smith was at Bear Mountain when Smith reported to him that a reserve captain, who was his superior, was intoxicated. Col. Giffin at that time was resident inspector of C. C. C. camps.

The captain was urged not apply for renewal when his tour of duty was over, Giffin said, and Smith got his post.

"I found Smith intelligent and suave," Col. Giffin testified, "and thought highly of him at that time."

When Col. Giffin was transferred to another camp Smith accompanied him as his adjutant, at Giffin's request, the colonel testified.

McAdoo Accused Of 'Shake Down'

Funds

Mr. Roosevelt is considering running again.

"You know how he likes to break precedents," the told the Associated Press, adding, however, that the tradition against a third term would prove insurmountable.

"That is one precedent the American people will not break," he declared.

Secretary Ickes and Relief Administrator Hopkins are hoping the President can continue in office, he charged, adding:

"They have the best jobs now they ever had in their lives and the best jobs they ever will have."

Hopkins Up Today.

One of the matters to be considered by the Sheppard committee this morning is Hopkins' recent assertion that 90 per cent of those on relief would vote for Roosevelt.

Investigators will report to the committee on inquiries they have made into charges of improper campaign practices in Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

Other States in which charges of irregular procedure have been filed include Illinois, Missouri, Georgia and North Carolina.

McAdoo "Jackpot" Seen.

In connection with the California charges, a statement was issued here by the Jeffersonian Democrats of Los Angeles citing Senate ouster actions against William S. Vare, Pennsylvania; Truman Newberry, Michigan, and Frank L. Smith, Illinois, and quoting Mellen as saying:

"There are several thousand persons in California on the Federal pay roll. When you consider this in connection with the charges that McAdoo and his henchmen are levying campaign exactions of 5 to 10 per cent of the annual salaries of these workers, the potential amount to be raised would make the corrupt and excessive slush funds of the past look like penny ante poker compared with the enormous jackpot being raised for McAdoo by frying the fat out of Federal jobholders."

Mellen requested the committee to question Judge John W. Preston and Sheridan Downey, other senatorial candidates; Pierson M. Hall, Carl Pustau, William H. Neblett, McAdoo's former law partner, and the Senator's campaign managers, George Creel, Hamilton Cotton and George White.

At the same time the department announced the total for the first-day sale in Washington of the new 5-cent Monroe stamps as $6,985.05, representing 139,701 stamps, including a sale of 98,282 first-day covers.

Alexandria Man Sleeps on Wharf, Awakes, Drowns

Charles "Sparky" Thomas, 27, 1314 Princess street, Alexandria, was drowned yesterday when he fell into the Potomac River from the Cameron street wharf. His body was recovered 3 hours later by harbor police and removed to the District Morgue.

Witnesses said Thomas fell asleep on the wharf. When he awoke, they said, he lost his balance, toppled into the river and failed to reappear.

County Refusal Held No Bar to GHA Hospital

Kirkpatrick Says 'We Don't Propose to Let This Setback Stop Us.'

Refusal of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners to grant Group Health Association, Inc., permission to operate a hospital in Chevy Chase, Md., will not kill the hospital plan, William C. Kirkpatrick, G. H. A. president, said yesterday.

The statement followed announcement of the commissioners' decision, based on a public hearing on the application Monday night, that a hospital would be undesirable on the site proposed. The health association had planned to convert a residence on the 7-acre tract on Davidson drive, near Wisconsin avenue, and use a smaller outbuilding as a nurses' home.

"The county doctors' opposition came as no surprise to us," said Kirkpatrick. "It was in keeping with the policy of the profession to combat the group health idea in every way possible.

"We don't propose, however, to let this setback stop us."

Indicating that the commissioners' action was no surprise, he said several other possible sites are under consideration.

All but two of the county residents who were heard on the hospital application Monday night argued against granting of a permit. William F. Prettyman, an attorney representing the Montgomery County Medical Board, suggested that action be deferred until the legal status of G. H. A. is determined in District Court here.

Steel Chiefs Hint They'll Slash Pay

Steel

ingham, Ala., and 36½ cents an hour at Gadsden, Ala. In the Eastern region Republic pays 59½ cents an hour at Buffalo and 56 cents at Moline, Ill.

When Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, asked for economic justification of the Buffalo and Moline rates, T. F. Patton, Republic counsel, answered that the rates were in direct relation to the base wage of those localities.

Speculation was aroused when O. R. Strackbein, board member, questioned several steel officials on the feasibility of setting differentials in base wage rates in favor of small producers. He noted the difficulties faced by small producers competing against economies large manufacturers obtain by mass production and by ownership of raw materials.

Protests from small producers were coming in to the board rapidly, arguing against the C. I. O. proposal of Monday that a flat 62½-cents-an-hour base wage be fixed in the Eastern area. One letter, from the George W. Prentiss Company, employing 150 men at Holyoke, Mass., declared "small business is being strangled."

Guardsmen Visit Endless Caverns As 'War' Recesses

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Strasburg, Va., July 26.—After a week of strenuous activity assisting the staff of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord in its war maneuvers in the vicinity of Winchester, Va., the Headquarters Company and the Headquarters Detachment of the Twenty-ninth Division today visited the Endless Caverns at New Market in 11 trucks, driven by men of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment.

The general staff has paused in its field activity and is studying new problems created by the concentration of heavy reinforcements of enemy Red troops along the battle front. The Twenty-ninth Division had chased the Reds out of Winchester and had advanced to a point about 2 or 3 miles northeast of the city. The task of Gen. Reckord now is to consolidate his gains and entrench for a strong defense.

The staff will go out into the field again tomorrow to continue its problems.

Troops of the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company and the Medical Department detachment of the special troops returned to camp today after an overnight bivouac.

Rites Set Tomorrow For Nunzio LiCausi

Funeral services for Nunzio Li Causi, 47, Takoma Park, Md., shoemaker and well-known Washington musician, who was found dead at his home, 214 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., Monday, will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. at the Holy Rosary Catholic Church, Third and F streets northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A certificate of suicide was issued by Dr. Francis X. Richardson, who pronounced Li Causi dead after he was found hanging from a door in a bedroom in the rear of his shop by his son, Stephen, 11.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Sympathy 20-to-1 for England-France Against Fascist Powers in Case of War.

Canada
GREAT BRITAIN FRANCE
UNITED STATES
Atlantic Ocean
Spain
Mexico
Africa

A Nation-wide survey of American opinion on the anniversary of the World War shows that if France and England went to war with Germany and Italy, American voters would sympathize with France and England by a majority of more than 20 to 1.

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, July 27.—On the anniversary of Austria's declaration of war against Serbia which started the World War 24 years ago tomorrow, a strikingly large majority of Americans in a national survey say they would sympathize with England and France if those two powers went to war with Italy and Germany.

George Gallup

American sympathy for England and France is so pronounced that for every voter who would side with Italy and Germany, more than 20 say they would sympathize with England and France. Thus a "sympathy bloc" exists between the United States and the two great democracies of Europe, even though the United States clings to the old policy of no entangling alliances.

The American attitude was indicated by a national survey conducted by the institute just before the British King and Queen visited France to demonstrate the bonds of friendship between those two countries. A cross-section of American voters was asked:

"If England and France have a war with Germany and Italy, which side would your sympathies be with?"

England and France	65%
Italy and Germany	3
Neither side	32

While the figures indicate the tendency of opinion during peacetime, it is entirely possible that, faced with an actual war, the public attitude might change. But at the moment, with Great Britain and France straining to keep the peace, the facts seem to be that England could count on America's sympathy at least in case of armed conflict.

The survey results do not necessarily indicate, however, that the Nation would want to express this loyalty by actually going to war to help England or France.

The Nation's deep love of peace, the disillusionment in the results of the last war, the defaulting of the allies on their American war debts—all of these things have apparently had little effect on the fraternal feelings of American voters for their sister democracies. Even though the institute found, in a survey last year, that 70 per cent of voters think it was a mistake for the United States to enter the World War, sentiment still strongly leans toward the two principal allies who helped to get us in.

Can U. S. Stay Out?

If England and France do go to war with the Fascist powers, can the United States stay out? This question was also put to voters in the survey. The results show opinion almost evenly divided, with a small majority believing that America can stay out. Fifty-four per cent felt we could remain neutral, while 40 per cent declared we would be drawn into the conflict. This division of opinion is in marked contrast to sentiment a year and a half ago. In January, 1937, an institute survey found 62 per cent saying we could stay out of the next European war, as compared to only 54 per cent today.

Democracies Favored.

The current survey makes it abundantly clear that the Nation's sympathies abroad are largely determined by the type or form of government existing in European countries. Thus, the chief reason given by voters for their sympathy with England and France in case of a new war is "We'd naturally stick with the democatic countries." Another large group of voters put it this way: I'm against dictators and Fascists."

When, a year ago, the institute asked voters: "Which European country do you like best?" the vote for England was far in the lead, with France second.

The actual results were: England, 55 per cent; France, 11 per cent; Germany, 8 per cent; Finland, 4 per cent; Ireland, 4 per cent; other countries 18 per cent.

Cardenas, Hay Discuss Reply to U. S. Demands

Mexico City, July 26 (U.P.).—President Cardenas conferred today with Gene Eduardo Hay, secretary of foreign affairs, over a reply to the United States' demand for arbitration of the dispute over the expropriation of American-owned farm lands in Mexico.

It was reported without confirmation the Mexican government will accept conditionally arbitration. The newspaper Novedades said that it was known "that our nation will recognize all of its pledges."

Italy Expels U. S. Reporter In New Purge

By the United Press.

Rome, July 26.—The Fascist government, in the second act of its kind within five days, has ordered the expulsion from Italy of Dr. Paul Cremona, correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor and the London Observer, it was disclosed tonight.

Dr. Cremona, a British subject born in Malta, first believed that he was suspected of being a Jew and submitted documents to prove that his family had been pure Maltese Roman Catholic for 12 generations.

The government's only formal explanation for the order, giving him eight days in which to leave Italy was that it was based on "general reasons" which have nothing to do with his journaltistic work.

Inquiries by British Ambassador Lord Perth and an official of the United States Embassy at the Italian foreign office were said to have brought an explanation, however, that Cremona had spoken "injuriously" of persons in high places.

A foreign office official, questioned by a United States Embassy representative, because Cremona represents an American newspaper, said that the correspondent has been ordered to leave the country because of his unfavorable writing during the Italo-Ethiopian sanctions crisis two years ago.

Dr. Cremona, who has lived in Italy for 16 years and is vice president of the Foreign Press Association, was one of the best known foreign newspaper men in Italy and enjoyed an excellent reputation among his colleagues for his impartial reporting of Italian events since the rise of fascism.

Another Expelled.

Last Friday a simalar expulsion order was served upon Dr. Edward D. Kleinlerer, Rome correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency for 14 years.

Cremona was first told last Friday by the minister of popular culture, Dino Alfieri, that he must leave Italy. Cremona immediately presented documentary evidence showing he is not Jewish and appealed to the British and United States embassies.

The United States Embassy, informed that the expulsion order had nothing to do with Cremona's work for the Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, dropped its intervention in the matter after sending a report to Washington.

Paper Uninformed.

Boston, July 26 (AP).—The Christian Science Monitor said today the paper had no knowledge of the reasons for expulsion of its correspondent, Paul Cremona, from Italy.

"We have had no success in trying to determine from the Italian Embassy in Washington or the Italian government just what 'remarks he has made about a certain his personage," the paper's spokesman said.

Italian Propaganda.

Rome, July 26 (AP).—The Italian press is conducting a tremendous campaign to arouse enthusiasm for the new Fascist anti-Jewish policy, but thus far there has been no conspicuous success.

The anti-Semitic faction of the Fascist Party has been demanding that Jews be excluded from teaching, journalism, the arts and other occupations influencing national thought.

It also has demanded that positions of command in the army and of the leadership in the Fascist regime be closed to Italy's 47,000 Jews, and that Italo-Jewish marriages be forbidden.

Whether such regulations, strongly suggestive of Nazi Jewish policy, are adopted may depend on two factors:

The reaction to the doctrine of race among the mass of Italians who are cool to anti-Semitism.

The future status of relations between Italy and what Premier Mussolini likes to term the "Demo-Plutocracies"—the world's democracies.

Fascism heretofore has said no serious Jewish problem existed in Italy. Only 1 out of every 915 Italians is a Jew, compared with 1 of every 130 Germans. 1 of every 190 Frenchmen and 1 of every 28 Americans.

Story of Navy's Daring Landing In '98 Colors Puerto Rico Fete

Young Officer Who First Took U. S. Flag Ashore Under Fire Now a Retired Admiral Living Quietly in Washington.

While the fortieth anniversary of the American occupation of Puerto Rico was marked in Ponce Monday by an attempt on the life of Gov. Winship, in Washington historians peacefully unearthed a vivid account of one of the historic actions of July 25, 1898.

ADMIRAL HUSE.

The following description of a naval landing at the Puerto Rican village of Guanica comes from the log of the U. S. S. Gloucester, which before the Spanish-America war was J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair:

"Eight a. m. to noon, Monday, July 25, 1898.

"Lying off Guanica harbor waiting for the fleet to come up. Made signal to Massachusetts (flagship), 'Shall I go in?' answered, 'Yes, you can try it.' At 9 a. m., entered harbor in advance of fleet. No guns could be seen on either side of the entrance. A few people were moving about near the lighthouse.

"As the town came into view, a Spanish flag was seen flying from a high staff. One bow gun was fired into one of the bluffs as a signal; no attention was paid to this and we could see people leaving the town by different routes. Our next shot was sent over the flagstaff at a high elevation. The firing was not returned and the Spanish flag was not hauled down.

"Lieut. H. P. Huse and Lieut. T. C. Wood went ashore with an armed boat's crew, lowered the Spanish flag and hoisted ours. The men aboard ship cheered to see our flag ashore.

"Almost immediately after this, a rapid fire of rifles was heard and we became aware that our men had been attacked; many rifle bullets struck the water alongside us and went singing past.

"Lieut. Huse hailed us, requesting us to fire over him. The after guns were elevated to 2,000 yards and fired repeatedly by Ensign J. T. Edson and Assistant Surgeon J. F. Bransford in the direction indicated. . . .

"Another armed boat was sent in charge of Lieut. G. H. Norman and Assistant Engineer A. M. Procter and by this time some boats of the Massachusetts had entered the harbor.

"Lieut. Huse returned with landing party, having left Lieut. Wood with a squad of men and the Colt gun . . . After our work was done and the troopships were anchored in the harbor, Gen. Miles came on board and complimented Capt. Wainwright on the manner of his action during the forenoon."

The Spanish flag which was replaced by the Stars and Stripes that July day of 1898 was sent to the museum at the United States Naval Academy by Lieut. Huse, executive officer of the Gloucester.

Lieut. Huse subsequently became one of the outstanding officers in the Navy. After American occupation of Vera Cruz in the Mexican crisis of 1914 he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. He was named a rear admiral two years later.

In 1918, at the age of 61, the admiral performed the unique feat of diving overboard from his flagship to rescue a drowning sailor.

Vice Admiral Harry McClaren Pinckney Huse, retired, now lives quietly at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. He shuns publicity; but he can't avoid history.

And history has permanently recorded the name of the officer who commanded one of the first American detachments to land on the island of Puerto Rico.

Japanese Peril Americans on Way to Hankow

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), July 27.—Japanese columns rolled up the Yangtze Valley toward Hankow today in the wake of a fleeing Chinese army, heading toward the "resort town" of Kuling, where many foreigners, including 57 Americans, have summer homes.

The invading army, gathering momentum at every mile, occupied the strategic city of Kiukiang, on the Yangtse 135 miles below Hankow, after a brief battle in which several buildings flying the American and British flags were reported looted and damaged.

Meanwhile the American colony at Kuling sent a message to the American Embassy here, saying they were establishing a "safety zone" for foreigners as the Chinese and Japanese armies approached the town.

The Chinese military headquarters admitted the occupation of Kiukiang, and said the Chinese were retreating toward Nanchang.

Foreign military observers believed that the capture of Kiukiang had sealed the fate of Hankow and that the next decisive battle would be fought south of the Yangtse near Nanchang, with the Japanese making a sweeping arc toward the Hankow-Canton Railroad.

Kuling, which lies on a bluff at the upper end of Poyang Lake, is directly in the path of this advance, and while it was believed the armies would not stage a battle at Kuling, it was feared the Chinese might elect to take advantage of its heights to stand off the Japanese.

The Japanese spokesman said they were unable to identify what foreign property was damaged, but several buildings had been damaged during Chinese occupation. The American missions at Kiukiang include the American church, the China island mission, Methodist Episcopal, Seventh Day Adventist, Women's Foreign Mission Society and other smaller buildings.

A Domei report said many buildings flying the America, British, German, French and Italian flags were damaged and looted.

The fall of Kiukiang apparently was accomplished by a direct frontal attack, instead of a flanking movement usually employed by the Japanese. An advance detachment of about 5,000 troops penetrated the suburban areas and after a night of severe street fighting cut through to the heart of the city.

Russian Raid Beaten Back, Japan Claims

300 Reds Flee After 5-Hour Battle; Town Burned, Tokyo Press Says.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 27.—Tension between Japan and Russia over long-brewing border disputes reached its most critical point in weeks today after 300 Soviet border troops were reported to have dashed over the Manchukuo border, burned a small frontier town and retreated to the Soviet side of the border after a five-hour battle.

The fighting, reported by the Domei (Japanese) News Agency and correspondents of several Japanese newspapers, was regarded as the most serious incident in the series of border clashes which have strained relations between the two countries.

The Tokyo Nichi Nichi reported in a special dispatch from Mutankiang that Manchukuo troops had engaged the Russians in a pitched battle after the Red guards had occupied the town of Yaolintze, in northeastern Manchukuo.

Second Clash in 24 Hours.

The fighting at Yaolintze was the second outbreak reported along the border in 24 hours. Earlier the Domei Agency had reported a detachment of 20 Russian infantrymen and 30 cavalrymen crossed the frontier at an unspecified point, probably near Hunchun, and been thrown back by Japanese-Manchukuo border guards.

The open fighting, coming on the heels of last week's bitter dispute over Soviet attempts to fortify a hill near Changkufeng, on the border above Hunchun, was expected to interfere seriously with diplomatic negotiations under way for a settlement of that matter.

The Japanese added a further issue in the rapidly increasing irritants to Japanese-Soviet relations when they prepared to make a formal representation to the Russian government concerning alleged infractions of treaty provisions on north Saghalien Island.

The Japanese foreign office spokesman said his government would seek an easement of treatment which Soviet officials have accorded Japanese oil concessionaries on Saghalien. He said the Russians are "constantly violating" terms of the 1925 treaty on Saghalien oil rights.

Meanwhile officials awaited further reports of the clashes along the border, where Russian troops have been massing for several days.

Corrigan Resents Tale He Used Map

London, July 26 (U.P.).—Douglas G. Corrigan, who flew the "wrong way" and crossed the Atlantic to Ireland, got his temper up yesterday when he was greeted in London by a rumor he tore up his maps and threw them into the ocean when he sighted the Irish coast.

The 31-year-old Californian, still sticking to his story it was just an accident that he landed in Dublin instead of Los Angeles, snapped:

"Bring me a piece of those maps before I take the trouble to answer that question."

Corrigan came to London by plane—but as a passenger—for a sightseeing tour as the guest of another American of Irish descent, Ambassador Kennedy.

Mexico Boosts Oil Wages.

Mexico City, July 26 (AP).—Wage increases of 440,760 pesos (about $89,000) a month became effective yesterday for the 15,000 employes of Mexico's oil industry. Vincente Cortes Herrara, general manager of the petroleum department, announced also plans for drilling ten new wells in Pozarica, 12 in the Panuco-Ebano area and 12 in the Isthmus area.

SWAN DIVE—The easy grace of Marshall Wayne's descent depends on muscular coordination, cast-iron nerve control. Wayne clinched top diving honors for the U. S. A. in the last Olympic competition.

HALF-TWIST—Split-second timing—perfect form! Marshall Wayne can't risk jitters. Discussing smoking, he says: "Camels are easy on my nerves—they set me right. Most divers I know prefer Camels."

JACK-KNIFE—Muscles tense in the blue—a thrilling pause aloft—an arrowlike flash into the pool, leaving scarcely a telltale ripple. As one spectator exclaimed: "The water seems to part to let Wayne in!"

INTERMISSION—and a Camel! "Always after an exhausting tournament," says champion Wayne, "I light up a Camel for a very welcome 'lift.' Camels add a lot to my comfort and contentment!"

"Camels agree with me in a lot of ways!"

SAYS MARSHALL WAYNE OLYMPIC PLATFORM DIVING CHAMPION

OTHER CAMEL SMOKERS TELL THEIR EXPERIENCES TOO

(Left) IONE REED, daring movie stunt girl. Her most famous exploit: a dangerous but well-planned leap from speeding auto to speeding train. It's easy to see that healthy nerves are a "must" with Miss Reed. "Camels," she says, "are so mild that steady smoking never gets my nerves even the least bit frayed. Camels don't ever tire my taste either."

GOLF'S GREAT STRATEGIST, HENRY PICARD (right), analyzes every stroke. He used the same care in picking his cigarette. "Camels are different," says Mr. Picard, "from all angles! When tournament play tires me out, a Camel gives my energy a friendly 'lift.' Camels agree with me—all 'round. Most top-flight golfers I know smoke Camels."

"CALLS COMING IN FAST," says Radio Patrolman Harold Sickles, "put me under a steady tension. I can't afford jittery nerves. So my off-duty smoke is Camel. Camels certainly put a lot more pleasure and contentment in my smoking. I smoke Camels plenty 'for digestion's sake.' Believe me, 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel'—any time!"

THEY CERTAINLY ARE, ELNORA, FROM MANY ANGLES. CAMELS NEVER TIRE MY TASTE AND THEY ARE EASY ON MY THROAT TOO. EVEN AFTER STEADY SMOKING, THEY DON'T BOTHER MY NERVES. CAMELS ARE SWELL!

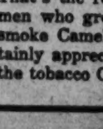
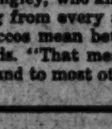
Tobacco growers know "inside" reasons for preferring Camels
These planters tell what they know about Camel's finer, more expensive tobaccos



"At the warehouse sales," says Leon Mullen, experienced planter, "Camel buys the choice grades of tobacco. That's the reason why most of us men who grow and know tobacco smoke Camel cigarettes. We certainly appreciate the difference in the tobacco Camel buys."



"Almost every one of my fine baskets of tobacco went to Camel buyers last year," says G. A. Langley, who knows tobacco growing from every angle. "Better tobaccos mean better smoking," he adds. "That means Camels to me—and to most other growers too."

2 More Enter Montgomery's Political Race

8213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Two new candidates for the board of commissioners, a Democrat and a Republican, entered the political arena in Montgomery County yesterday.

Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, of Silver Spring, who was elected on the Fusion ticket four years ago, filed his candidacy for re-election with the clerk of the circuit court at Rockville, subject to the Republican primaries in September.

Charles T. Crockett, of Chevy Chase, announced he would seek the commission seat from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase-Potomac District. In the first political venture, Crockett, a plumbing and heating contractor, will be supported by the Independent Democratic faction.

Commissioner Coughlan, before his election to the board of commissioners, served for several years as postmaster in Silver Spring.

Meanwhile the names of three other persons, one a woman, who have been indorsed for political office by the Independent Democratic faction, were revealed by Eugene B. Casey, chairman.

They are Mrs. Marguerite Fischer, of Bethesda, for a seat on the orphan's court bench; Harry Hoskinson, of Germantown, and Douglas Blandford, mayor of Rockville, for membership on the Democratic Central Committee for the county. All are expected to announce within the next several days.

Mrs. Fischer is president of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Montgomery County and will be the first woman ever to run for a seat on the orphan's court bench. Hoskinson is a former vice president of the Sanitary Grocery Co.

Plans for the construction of a 6-room school at Flower and Carroll avenues in Takoma Park were submitted to the board of county commissioners at their meeting in Rockville yesterday by officials of the Washington Missionary College.

The building will house a normal school for teachers in Seventh-Day Adventist Church schools. The site is adjacent to the Washington Missionary College and the Washington Sanitarium.

The commissioners appointed Robert L. Adamson, of Redland, as county sanitary inspector to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of G. Lawrence Tolson. Adamson will start work immediately at a salary of $1,600 per year. He is a graduate of Washington College and has been employed for the last year at Beltsville, Md.

Frank H. Hibberd, of Mount Rainier, appeared before the board with an offer to furnish free traffic signs for county roads. He said the signs would be supplied free by a national advertising concern.

State Senator Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, yesterday issued a statement denying reports in the press that he had sponsored legislation in the Maryland General Assembly creating a fourth judgeship in the Montgomery-Frederick Judicial Circuit. Prescott is now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for judge.

Senator Prescott declared that the bill creating the new office had been introduced by a delegate from Frederick County and that he had voted for it in the State Senate only after asking the president of the Montgomery County Bar Association to call a special meeting to consider the proposal. He voted for the bill, Prescott said, after both the Montgomery and Frederick Bar Associations had indorsed it.

The candidate further declared that after its passage by the General Assembly the law was ratified by an overwhelming majority in a referendum incident to the 1936 election.

"This," Prescott concluded, "states the history of the amendment and my participation in its adoption. If there be any impropriety in this, I hope my prospective opponent will point it out in detail to the voters of this circuit."

The bill referred to amended the State constitution to provide for four judges in the Frederick-Montgomery judicial circuit and provided that two must reside in each county. Since two of the three incumbent judges are Frederick residents, the fourth seat must be filled by a Montgomery County candidate.

The Young Republican Club of Montgoery County will hold a theater party Monday at 8:30 p. m. at the Roadside Theater on the Rockville pike. Mrs. Doris Seabold and Mrs. Vincent Fleishell, both of Silver Spring, are in charge of arrangements.

Virginia and D. C. Pythians to Meet In New Market

New Market, Va., July 26 (AP).—Three thousand Pythians and members of their families from Virginia and the District of Columbia are expected to throng this Shenandoah County community next Saturday to mark the holiday of the Dramatic Order of Knights of Khorassan.

Col. George C. Cabell, of Norfolk, grand keeper of records and seals, of the State order, will be the principal speaker at the ceremonial which will take place on the grounds of Hines Memorial Pythian Home, just north of here, in the afternoon. A program of entertainment featuring children of the home and the Rajah Temple band and drill team of Roanoke has been prepared.

Among State Pythian officials expected to attend are D. B. Sigman, royal vizier, and Stokes E. Gray, secretary, of Roanoke; W. W. McNicholas, grand chancellor, of Norfolk, and Mrs. Jeanette Baker, grand chief of Pythian Sisters, of Fredericksburg.

New Symphony Head Named in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 26.—Russell Gerhart, Altoona, Pa., has been named director of the Hagerstown Symphony Orchestra, succeeding Stephen Deak, conductor of the orchestra for the last three years, who will remain this winter on the West Coast. Mr. Gerhart is director of the Civic Symphony of Altoona, in its tenth season.

broke from the crowd, first in a long moan and then in a series of sharp, individual screams.

Mingled with the scream as it died away was the crash of glass as the body struck the marquee and bounced off, falling then straight downward in a battered mass, face down.

Thousands at Scene.

When word of the jump spread to crowds milling in nearby side streets, thousands rushed to the hotel, breaking police lines and paralyzing traffic.

While the net was being hoisted, spectators in the immediate vicinity saw Ward nervously lighting one cigarette after another.

They could see nothing but his white shirt and the glow of the cigarettes.

"It had a rope around my waist," said a policeman who had been assigned to the seventeenth floor rescue operations, "and I was just going out the window (in an effort to clutch Ward). He was talking to an old pal of his and didn't seem to notice much until all of a sudden he looked up and saw men coming down the ropes from the eighteenth floor.

Didn't Say a Word.

"He didn't say a word. He stepped off the ledge and missed the net by very little—maybe 2 or 3 inches."

Ward's last words were heard by Dr. G. C. Presner, a city health department physician, who had talked with him frequently during the day.

"He said if he could promise him that life was worth living he would come in," the doctor said.

"He said many people close to him were against him. He said that he tried many ventures and failed. He said he knew he should be penalized."

"No Way Out of It."

"There's no way out of it," Dr. Presner quoted Ward as saying.

"I have been up here many hours trying to convince myself of a reason for living. I've made up my mind."

At that point, Dr. Presner said, Ward glanced upward a fleet moment and stepped off into space—his body hurtling to meet the shrike that welled up from the crowd below.

"I don't think it was because of fear or shock," Dr. Presner said. "He had made his decision. The poor fellow was irratoinal during the last half an hour."

Ward was the son of a Southampton, N. Y., railway express agent. The hotel room from which he walked this morning to the ledge was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Valentine, socially prominent wealthy young couple of Chicago and Southampton, exclusive Long Island summer colony.

Out of Work a Year.

Valentine said Ward formerly was employed here with a telephone company and by a bank and with a telephone company in Southampton. He had been out of work for the last year and had been despondent.

Valentine said he had taken Ward and a sister, Mrs. Katherine Bull, to Chicago a week ago in an effort to cheer him.

Southampton police records showed Ward attempted suicide July 11, 1937, by cutting his throat with a knife. He recovered in the Southampton Hospital and on August 26 was committee to the State Hospital at Central Islip.

laughter when Chamberlain remarked about the lack of a settlement in Spain "by no fault of the Italians." Commons went into an uproar over this unfortunate remark. The broad burrs of Scottish members rasped through the laughter to taunt uncomfortable Chamberlain. The Prime Minister fidgeted and pleaded for a hearing. He went on to explain lamely that Mussolini had reduced his garrison at Libya ("and doubled it elsewhere," someone shouted); he had ceased anti-British propaganda and he had fulfilled his role in the non-intervention meetings. There were more derisive shouts at this tribute to Mussolini's faithfulness.

Earlier in the session a Liberal tormentor, Geoffrey Mander, told Chamberlain that the best contribution to a national unity would be the resignation of the prime minister himself, and Communist Willie Gallacher echoed, "That's a bull's eye!" But Chamberlain ignored the advice to resign.

Denies Pressure on Prague.

Members of all parties were keenly interested in Chamberlains explanation of his latest intervention in Czechoslovakia involved in the impending dispatch to Prague of Lord Runciman as mediator between Czechs and Sudeten Germans.

Chamberlain, who is accused by his critics of putting undue pressure upon the Czechs and of favoring the cause of the Germans, began with a mild observation that "it is very difficult for people in this country to arrive at a just conclusion as to the rights and wrongs of the dispute between the Czechoslovawian government and the Sudeten Germans.

"Many of us," he said, "would have been very glad indeed if we could have left this matter to be decided between the two parties concerned. Unfortunately, here again we are only too conscious that there are all the materials present for a breach of the peace, with incalculable consequences if the matter is not handled boldly and with a reasonable amount of expedition.

"In accordance with our general policy and in close collaboration with France, we have done everything that we could to facilitate a peaceful solution of the dispute.

"Sir Archibald Sinclair spoke of many rumors, one of which was to the effect that we were hustling the Czech government. There is no truth in that; indeed the very opposite is true."

Feared Deadlock.

With the Czechoslovakian minister in London, Jan Mazaryk, listening from the diplomats' gallery, the prime minister continued:

"Our anxiety has been rather lest the Czechoslovakian government should be too hasty in dealing with a situation of such delicacy where it was most desirable that the two sides should not get into a position where they were set and were unable to have any further give and take."

Admitting under inquiry that his government had urged Prague to submit their proposals to Sudeten Leader Henlein before putting them before the Prague Parliament, Chamberlain said:

"We did so because if by any chance an agreement could be come to before any settlement was actually put before parliament, that would be the best solution of all. I do not think any great pressure was required for us to induce the Czechoslovakian government to give this opportunity for a full and frank discussion."

Chamberlain said it had begun to appear doubtful whether without some outside assistance such a voluntary agreement was likely to take place. He added:

"In response to a request from the Czechoslovakian government we have agreed that a person with the necessary qualifications should investigate this question on the spot and if need be to suggest means for bringing the two parties together.

"Such a mediator would be independent of all governments and would act wholly in his personal capacity. It is obvious that the task will be a very exacting, responsible and delicate one, and His Majesty's government feels they are fortunate in having secured from Lord Runciman a promise to undertake the task, providing he is assured of the confidence of the Sudeten Germans, as well as the assistance of the Czechoslovak government."

Responding to interruptions at this point, Chamberlain said the Czech Government had accepted Lord Runciman but no reply had had as yet been received from Sudeten Germans. Chamberlain said the British had impressed upon both the German and Czech governments "our own sense of the desirability of restraint." A settlement in Czechoslovakia, he said, might open the way for a genaeral appeasement throughout Europe.

Chamberlain Optimistic.

"We have already demonstrated the possibility of a complete agreement between a democratic and a totalitarian state and I do not see why that experience should not be repeated," Chamberlain said. "When Herr Hitler made his offer of a naval treaty, he made a notable gesture, the value of which, it appears to me, has not been fully appreciated."

Chamberlain's reference was to the Anglo-German naval ratio treaty which was secretly negotiated in violation of the Versailles Treaty and to the displeasure of the French.

The prime minister concluded his 40-minute speech with an astounding outburst of optimism. He said that the year 1938 had begun ominously but now that more than half the year had passed "we all feel that the atmosphere is lighter."

A Labor spokesman, who follewed Chamberlain, remarked acidly that in the process "democracy in Spain had come very near being obliterated, Austria had been gobbled up by Germany, Czechoslovakia was being daily menaced, and the Chinese were fighting for their lives."

Smith Majority Is Predicted at Arlington Polls

County to Give Incumbent Edge Over Dodd Observers Say.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509.

Political circles around the courthouse yesterday predicted Representative Howard W. Smith will come out of Arlington County, August 2, with at least a two to one margin over his Democratic primary opponent, William E. Dodd, jr.

Dodd addressed more than 100 voters of Virginia Highlands in the Community House Monday night, and will be in the county again tonight when he speaks before the voters of Barcroft. The meeting will be held in the Community House at 8 p. m.

Robert N. Anderson, directing Dodd's campaign claims Dodd is gaining ground as the campaign comes to a close. Anderson will be heard over station WJSV tonight at 7 o'clock.

There will be a special dinner meeting of the Northern Virginia Builders Association tomorrow at the Washington Golf and Country Club a 7 p. m. Fritz Westernberger, president, announced last night.

Among the guests will be County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan; members of the county board; Andrew Jensen, building inspector; C. L. Kinnier, county engineer; Frank L. Dieter, planning engineer, and Donald Locke, zoning engineer.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss proposals for row house development in Arlington County, and the revised zoning ordinance.

The executive committee of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, meeting yesterday at Clarendon, elected Miss Eunice Gilman assistant secretary.

Plans for a lawn party, August 12, for the benefit of the Arlington Hospital Association, were made yesterday at a meeting of Auxiliary Unit No. 2, of Clarendon. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. George DeVaugn, 2803 Key boulevard.

Mrs. Carrie Gibson, president, announced the appointment of the following committee on arangements: Mrs. C. W. Watt (chairman), Mrs. W. D. Martin, Mrs. A. Gertrude Dawson, Mrs Maude Heys, Mrs. Carrie Gibson, Mrs. R. L. Edwards and Mrs. Jessie Laswel.

Dr. D. M. Faulkner, of Richmond, examined 40 cripled children at the quarterly orthopedic clinic held yesterday at Clarendon Health Center, under the auspices of the county health department.

Dr. Faulkner was assisted by Mrs. N. R. Davies and Mrs. M. A. Rudasill, public health nurses, and Miss Pearl Griffith, of Washington.

Judge to Decide Friday in Attack On Va. Rum Body

Fredericksburg, Va., July 26 (AP).—Judge Frederick Coleman will give an opinion Friday in corporation court on an appeal by Cary Marshall, a restaurant proprietor, from a police court conviction on charges violating the State liquor control act.

Marshall, whose State wine-beer license was revoked, attacked that section of the liquor control law which gives the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board authority to take a license "because it should be revoked."

Counsel for Marshall contended that constitutional rights were violated by what they described as arbitrary discretion given the board to void licenses.

Marshall lost his license last March after he was charged with selling wine to an intoxicated person.

operation, and such amendments would be welcomed.

"But short of that," he said, "we are bent neither on nullification nor repeal. Our round tables are designed for healthy co-operative action, not for a sabbotage of law validly enacted or for oblique avoidance of our mandate under the act."

The program had been held up, he said, by inaction that was a product of misunderstanding.

Heat of Battle.

"The characterization in the heat of battle of that part of the act which calls for corporate simplification and geographical integration as a 'death sentence' has done inconceivable harm," he said. "Publicity-wise, it was clever; practically, it was very damaging. It cast the shadow of a hangman's noose on a purpose and program that are constructive and beneficial."

He described his speech today as an effort "to dispel that shadow."

He defined an integrated public utility system as one "whose utility assets are physically interconnected, or capable of physical interconnecting which under normal conditions may be economically operated as a single interconnected and co-ordinated system, confined in its operation to a single area or region, in one or more States, not so large as to impair advantages of localized management, efficient operation, of the effectiveness of regulation."

According to Douglas, studies of utilities with "diversified" properties indicated that they were less economic, less profitable, than "integrated, regional" companies with which they were compared.

Turns to Future.

Turning to the future, Douglas said:

"We have entered the period of action—constructive, not destructive action. As I announced last week, our move in the utilities power and light case to enforce compliance with the act means nothing more nor less than that we mean business. We are intent on doing the job which Congress has entrusted to us, and we desire to do it in a fair and constructive way. The most appropriate formula for bringing the variout systems withinu the pattern called for seems to be the trading properties and securities."

Black Controversy.

Cleveland, July 26 (AP).—Controversies over a resolution on the "eligibility" of Supreme Court Justice, Hugo L. Black ruffled the serenity of the American Bar Association tonight as committees labored to perfect the machinery of justice.

Dean Edward T. Lee, of John Marshall Law School, Chicago, refused to withdraw his resolution asking the United States Supreme Court for information on Justice Black's eligibility to serve despite the efforts of two Alabamans—one a "personal friend" of Black—to intervene.

"I am a personal friend of Hugo L. Black and I want to take the floor against this," said Circuit Judge Richard D. Evans, of Birmingham, Ala., at a meeting of the resolutions committee. Evans said the Supreme Court had once refused to rule on Black's eligibility and there was no reason for the association to press the matter.

Marvin Woodall, past president of the Birmingham Bar Association, said the resolution was "important."

Lee said he thought "the bar association owes it to the people to have this question cleared up."

The resolution, which will not reach the floor before Thursday, questions Black's right to serve because of a constitutiona provision that "no Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

Mass. Flood Crest Isolates 1,800 and Maroons 4 Towns

Boston, July 26 (U.P.).—The flood crest of the Charles River, moving steadily downstream, tonight had isolated 1,800 persons in Millis and marooned scores of families in Dover, Dedham, Needham and Natick. Damage already is estimated at more than $3,000,000.

Highways between the towns and providing transportation to other Massachusetts communities either were washed out or inundated.

Judge Hardy and His Family Make a Box-Office "Natural"

'Love Finds Andy Hardy' Proves Mettle of Two Youngsters Talented Beyond Their Years; Benchley Exposes the Newt; Lew Lehr to Visit; Notes of Theater.

IF the executives in charge of production at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer aren't careful, they will "snow-ball" their "Judge Hardy" series of domestic comedies into the most valuable box-office asset to be found on the Culver City lot.

This was forcefully borne in upon the quorum of the drama desks that witnessed the unspooling of "Love Finds Andy Hardy," latest of the film stories concerning Judge Hardy and his family, in the private projection room in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon. This picture, opening on the screen at Loew's Palace on Friday, is a box-office "natural."

BELL.

These simple, yet profound, revelations of the workings of a typical American household go beyond the matter of mere entertainment. They provide a deep insight into those priceless qualities of confidence and affection that should actuate all parents in their relationships with their children—and vice versa. There are moments in all of these cleverly contrived plays when they exert a tremendous emotional tug as a leavening of the laughter and a ballast for the lighter moments of the action.

One of these interludes occurs in the present subject when Master Andy Rooney, the hero of the story, and his father, Judge Hardy, have a heart-to-heart talk—man-to-man, they call it—in the living-room at home; another, in that perfect scene in which Judge Hardy is awakened to the extraordinary capability of the present generation of youngsters by the skill of a boy he has penalized for a minor offense, who manages to get an amateur radio message through to the judge's wife, unreachable by telephone. These are touches that would justify any picture ever made, regardless of cost, magnitude or distinction of cast.

But, at base, "Loves Finds Andy Hardy" is a rollicking comedy of a lad with romantic problems on his hands and not quite enough hands to cope with them, without the aid of a 12-year-old girl from the city, visiting next door. It is she who saves the day by an exercise of that feminine intuition that makes any woman the senior of any man, no matter how old.

All of this could go to pot, of course, without judicious casting. In the present instance, casting seems to have been a trifle better than judicious. It is practically perfect—as has been the case in a majority of the "Hardy" releases.

To a greater degree than in any other picture in which he has appeared, perhaps, the remarkable proficiency of Mickey Rooney as a potentially brilliant young actor is demonstrated in this film, of which he is the real star. Although the stubby Master Rooney gives the impression of being in his very early 'teens, he is, as a matter of fact, creeping up on his eighteenth year—which is in no sense a detraction from the excellence of his work. Sharing honors with him here is Judy Garland, considerably younger and still a prodigious young songstress.

Possibly the conspicuous ability of these two juvenile players is a matter of heredity. Each is the child of professional parents, with the theater born in his bones. "Love Finds Andy Hardy" is the beneficiary. So is the public.

* * * *

The unreeling of two short subjects preceded the preview of the "Hardy" feature yesterday. They were Robert Benchley's latest whimsy, "The Courtship of the Newt" and a semi-scientific adventure reel called "Tracking the Sleeping Sickness." Mr. Benchley's exposition of the private life of the newt is in his usual humorous vein and marks him further as probably the wittiest and most resourceful author-actor-director devoting his talents to a part-time job of producing the best of the screen's solo comedies. The newt is an amazing and amorous animal, as Mr. Benchly analyzes him. "Tracking the Sleeping Sickness," is an African miniature of "Yellow Jack," with the tse-tse fly pinch-hitting for the mosquito.

Lew Lehr, the tongue-twisting comic who has convinced the Nation that "monkeys is such cwazy people," will arrive in the Capital on Saturday of this week for the dual purpose of bidding his fellow-worker on the staff of the Fox Movietone News, Arthur De Titta, goodbye and bon voyage, and acting as master of ceremonies at the informal testimonial dinner being tendered Arthur that night by the Variety Club of Washington.

It is expected that Lowell Thomas, famous commentator, author and adventure, and Truman Talley, general manager of Fox Movietone News, also will be among the distinguished guests who will attend this banquet in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel.

After 10 years of notable service in the Capital, Mr. De Titta has been transferred to the European field by his company, with headquarters in Paris. He and his ebullient help-meet, Helen, will leave for their new post early next month.

* * * *

While not exactly "beating the gun," as was suggested here yesterday it might, RKO-Keith's Theater nevertheless will continue one day off its usual opening schedule for new bills at least one more week. That is to say, "Mother Carey's Chickens" will inaugurate its Fiteenth street engagement tomorrow, instead of on the customary Friday. This does not signify a curtailment of the "Little Tough Guy" run, for the reason that that spirited vehicle for the talents of the "Dead End" kids also opened on Thursday and will have completed its full week. "Mother Carey's Chickens," by the way, is heralded from all sides as one of the surprise pictures of recent release—"surprise," that is, to everyone but RKO-Radio, who gave it everything they had to make it a top-notcher. According to all report—the picture has not been previewed locally— they made good.

The postman always helps.

A Sabbath note from Charlie Kurtzman, recently transferred from the management of Loew's Capitol Theater, in this city, to Loew's Penn Theater, in Pittsburgh, has this, among other things, to say: "My feet are a bit more solidly planted in the Pittsburgh picture. I'm still traveling top speed, but another week or so and I'll have the local situation in hand—I hope. Meanwhile, I do like the town. I like the people, too. And the future looks bright."

That will be pleasant news to his many Washington friends.

A pretty postage card, postmarked Pittsfield, Mass., brings not quite so cheerful a message from Col. Angelo Ratto, vacationing manager of the Palace and "Mayor of F street." Says Angie: "Rain, rain, rain and still more rain, going into its seventh day—and only seven more days to go!"

* * * *

Personal aside to the tear-sheet "specialist" who uses an envelope of "Who's Who in the Nation's Capital," National Press Building: You forgot to sign your name.

* * * *

When you see Melvyn Douglas and Florence Rice slammed all over the place in "Fast Company," at the Columbia next week, don't worry. They were not injured, even if they did take about 20 spills apiece in making the picture. There is a reason. They were coached in how to avoid injury by Buster Keaton, erstwhile "king of the frozen-faced comics," who was called in by Director Eddie Buzzell to serve in the novel capacity of "comedy-fall technical adviser."

Buster should know. He began taking bumps as a child, when his dad used to carry him on stage in a shawl-strap and then throw him around like a bundle of rags.

Yeah, it's an ill wind, etc.

Imperial Fan Trio Treasured by Star

Jeanette MacDonald has three of the most priceless fans in the world, yet they have never asked her for an autograph!

They are Empress Eugenie, Empress Josephine and the Czarina of Russia—and all three silk fans are in the living room of her new home.

Miss MacDonald, whose hobby is collecting rare fans, was presented with the Czarina of Russia fan by her husband, Gene Raymond, on her birthday.

Due to the fact that this particular fan carries an unusual pattern on both sides, the star has it placed in a double-glass standing frame in order that its entire beauty may be visible.

All three are not only priceless but are authenticated treasures once owned and used by the imperial consorts whose names they bear in the "Sweethearts" star's collection.

Preview at Home.

Allen Jenkins held a typical Hollywood preview for "Abalone," the 16mm. film he produced by himself at Morro Bay, Calif. He rented an arc light for the front of his home as a guide to invited guests.

Cattle Stampeded By Use of Planes

By using airplanes to herd cattle, Hollywood discovered a new way of keeping locations clear for movie work.

John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, and other members of the company making "Bulldog Drummond in Africa," were threatened with delay while working in a desert canyon 100 miles from Hollywood.

Director Louis King solved the problem by instructing two aviators, employed in the film, to fly low over the herds. The method proved effective. The cattle stampeded out of the canyon.

Wellman Honored.

William A. Wellman, producer-director of "Men With Wings," Technicolor cavalcade of aviation, has been honored by Andre Duval, sculptor and early French aviator. Duval has presented Wellman with a specially-designed ashtray conceived by himself, which is to commemorate the title of the production.

Master Andy Loves Not Wisely, but Too Often!

WHY FATHERS AND MOTHERS TURN GRAY.

That is, unless they happen to be Judge and Mrs. Hardy, in which case they have nothing to worry about. In "Love Finds Andy Hardy," coming to Loew's Palace on Friday, the youngsters pictured above are triumphant in as fine a study of adolescence and American home life as has come to the screen. They are (left to right) Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland.

Anti-Trust Suit Is Uppermost In Movie Mind

Film Executives Keep Mum on Vital Topic as Hays Arrives on Coast.

By Frederick C. Othman.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 26.—The movie chieftains, who usually are willing to talk on any subject at length so long as their names are spelled right in resultant newspaper dispatches, unanimously turned into human clams today in connection with the Federal anti-trust suit against the industry.

Their silence, perhaps, was more significant than would have been their million-dollar words; it indicated that the day of the eighth-rate movie, which the theaters frequently are forced to show in spite of themselves, is nearing the end.

The civil suit instituted by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings charges simply that the same crew making movies exhibits them in its own theaters, thereby stifling competition. The Attorney General didn't say so, but this situation frequently keeps a good show from being unreeled; it also results in many a stinkeroo being foisted on on the helpless fans.

What Cummings wants is a free market, whereby every theater manager could take a look at Hollywood's merchandise and buy only that which he believes his customers would like to see.

Compromise Possible.

Will Hays, head of the Producers' Association, is in town, conferring with the movie-makers on their forthcoming court battle. They have their own side of the story, and they claim privately that a sweeping anti-trust order probably would be ruinous to some of them. Odds are that the Government and the producers will enter into a consent decree—tantamount to a compromise—and that at least some of the admitted evils of the present situation will be eliminated.

Let's consider first the good pictures which never are exhibited in a first class theater. They're the ones made by the independent studios, here, in New York and abroad. A good example is "African Holiday," produced by a retired insurance executive to show up the fakirs among African explorers. This film is one of the most interesting we ever saw, yet its producers could sell it only to those few independent theaters remaining in the large cities. Even some of these, under their contracts, had to buy another film from one of the big studios and neglect to show it on the night that "African Holiday" was unreeled.

Washington Saw It.

Still another excellent picture of the last few months was "Boy of the Streets," produced by Monogram. This company has its own distributing organization and it manages to show profits in rental of films to independent theaters, yet "Boy of the Streets" reached only a fraction of the fans who had every right to see it.

Each big studio makes around 50 pictures a year. About one-third of these usually are "A's," which means pictures on which considerable thought and money have been spent. Even then they're frequently not so good. It is unfair to single out a picture by name as a bad one, without reiterating that all studios have their unfortunate productions. With that in mind, we want to mention "The Big Broadcast of 1938," a picture for which nobody had a good word. It was an "A" production, but somehow it didn't jell. Yet every theater with a producer contract exhibited it and the customers walked out, feeling cheated.

Most of the out-and-out "B's" consist of several reels of film, produced on schedule. These so-called "program pictures" also go into all the theaters holding contracts with the major studios.

Stage Is Different.

The producers claim, with some justice, that when they sink money in large chunks into movies, they have a right to get it back. They say they can't afford to gamble, like Broadway stage producers, because they pay their writers and their stars and their directors fantastic salaries, no matter what kind of picture comes out the slot.

The Broadway showmen get rich if they have a hit. If they produce a flop, nobody gets paid.

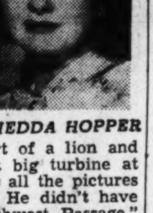
That, essentially, is the difference between the stage and the screen—and it's why the movie makers consider the antitrust suit such a body-blow. The obvious retort is to ask: "Well, why not make only good pictures hereafter?"

That is a lot easier suggested than done.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 26.—You've all laughed at Hollywood spending millions a year on beauty. How about the Statue of Liberty having her face and the rest of her lifted for $1,700,000? Every face in our town could be done for that, including my own. And Madame Liberty only $700,000 to begin with. Liberty comes higher and higher as the years go by.



HEDDA HOPPER

Spencer Tracy will need the heart of a lion and the energy of that big turbine at Boulder Dam to do all the pictures lined up for him. He didn't have enough with "Northwest Passage." Now he has "The Earl of Chicago," and goes to England for "National Velvet." Hey, Spence, how about lending me a hand, in your spare time, transplanting daisies?

They're adding another clause to Union XXX for the protection of property boys. These imported trained fleas, Sam and Sadie, rental $100, flown out from New York for "Zaza," made the property man's arm look like fancy tatooing. You see, they only feed on humans. Hope they're not hungry when they hop around on Claudette Colbert, or she'll have to take a longer rest than she did from the can-can.

They're part of the New York flea circus. The fleas have a special dressing room, an inch square, and are kept on leash by collars made of tiniest wire. What will happen if they import a centapede or a merry widow spider?—Goodness—shouldn't have given them the idea!

One of our major studios was 24 hours late in signing Marie Tempest for a picture. She's doing a play in London with John Gielgud. They're also trying to get him. However, they may be able to buy off the whole thing and bring 'em both over.

The fact that people have been standing in line five weeks to see "Moonlight Sonata" should mean something. No, not only old, but young, longing to see Marie again, not forgetting Paderewski.

Thet best dressed girl of the week is Miss Markey, Gene's 4-year-old daughter. She calls at the Twentieth Century-Fox studio every day. Sees the rushes with daddy, who then takes her to mamma, Joan Bennett.

I saw Mrs. Mervyn LeRoy, who used to work in the Fox story department, there the other day dressed in a soft pale blue sports outfit. Her pappy being one of the Warner boys, and her hubby a big shot producer at Metro, she thought the family had the studio situation well in hand, so she's taking vacation while listening to Will Durant's philosophy at U. C. L. A.

I wish Mrs. LeRoy would persuade either her father or husband to produce A. J. Cronin's first novel, "Hatters Castle," and put Oscar Homolka in the leading part. We've seen him in "Rhodes" and "Ebb Tide," which only whet our appetite for more.

With every producer in town trying to sign up Birdman Douglas Corrigan, it's only natural, this being a woman's town, that Marcella Burke should beat them to it. She's really got him on the dotted line for a picture based on his life story. And all because she received a fan letter on "Mad About Music" from John Cudahy, United States Minister to Ireland. Therefore, it was easy, through him, to talk over the long distance telephone to Corrigan, who said, "Sure you can do the story, but oh, shucks, what's all this hurry about?"

Marcello recently sold a story to David Selznick. He's using only the title, "Madly in Love." She got back the story, renamed it "Desperately Yours" and gets a New York production this fall.

Comedian Robert Coote, doing "Gunga Din" at Lone Pine, isn't sold on locations. His tent was pitched over a giant ant hill. That shouldn't worry you, Bobby. When I went on location at Santa Cruz Island, field rats played hide-and-seek on my chest. Discovered it wasn't me they wanted, but my soap, which was eaten down to a nub.

While visiting his pal, Akim Tamiroff, on the set of "Escape From Yesterday," internationally known Russian tenor, Michael Dido, was drafted for a part in the picture. He plays a stable boy. Imagine! He was formerly a crack rider in the White Russian army.

Heiress in Films.

Jane Clayton, an heiress from the New Mexico cow country, has signed for a role in a Hopalong Cassidy picture, "In Old Mexico," which Harry Sherman is producing with Bill Boyd in the leading role.

The Post's New Yorker

New York, July 26.

ALEX WOOLLCOTT soon may return to the stage. The management of the Paradise phoned him and offered a proposition: "Mr. Woollcott," was the feeler, "How would you like to be master of ceremonies at the Paradise Restaurant?" "I," was Mr. Woollcott's subtle reply, "would rather die!"

BILL BROWN, zealous member of the Boxing Commission, just can't understand the lack of honest endeavor among the ring men who fail to meet his tests. Brown conducts a health farm along the Hudson. Back in the years when "Irish" and "Police" were synonymous, he used to station himself at Ellis Island, wait for the incoming boats and rush the Irish immigrants to his farm, where he'd train them to become policemen. One immigrant proved to be disappointing. He could meet every department requirement—except height. Despite all conceivable stretching, he still lacked 1 inch in stature. The day before the tests the recruit approached Brown, handed him a club and announced that he had solved the problem. "Sock me over the head with a bat," he explained, "and that'll fix it." Brown socked, the Celt quivered, straightened and touched the lump on his head. "Not enough," he judged. "Try it once more." The bat descended again and this time it left a satisfactory growth.

The still groggy recruit was examined by the police officials the next day. He lifted the weights, sped 100 yards and took his place on the shooting range. They passed him all right—but never even measured him for his height!

MARC CONNELLY'S "Green Pastures," adapted from Roark Bradford's book, was one of Broadway's most amazing successes. The script had been kicked around the production offices many months before any one was willing to risk bringing it to the Broadway boards.

"You had your chance at it and turned it down," George R. Kaufman told Max Gordon. "You should have produced it." "I still think I was right," Gordon explained. "Would you put $40,000 into a play that had 16 colored persons on the stage—with one of them playing God?"

IT'S ONE OF BROADWAY'S CLASSICS, and Davidd Bath, the writer, still is finicky about the correct spelling of his name. When a newspaper reported Bath's divorce from Mary Hay the item had his name as "David." Bath immediately addressed a letter of complaint. "You spelled my wife's name correctly," he wrote, "and you spelled Richard Barthelmess' name correctly, too. Please remember that my name is Davidd—with two d's." The reply was terse. "God has only one!"

MIRIAM HOPKINS was introduced to a young collegian at Mayfair The freshie asked for a dance and the actress consented. The lad gushed his admiration and at the last strains of the waltz he asked Miss Hopkins to marry him. Miriam was amazed and when she recovered extended her regrets. The flaming youth was disconsolate. "Then," he compromised, "will you give me your autograph?"

WILL MORRISSEY finally has confessed to this, after all these years: Will wrote the score for "The Passing Show in 1916." For his finale, he composed a song, entitled "Throw a Little Snowball at Me"—in which the chorines hurled soft white pellets at the audience. At the dress rehearsal Morrissey asked the opinion of the ever-conscious-of-expense producer, Jake Shubert. "Write another verse for that song," Shubert directed, "to make the audience throw those snowballs back!"

AN ORCHESTRA LEADER who receives $1,000 per broadcast was berated by his sponsor this week, who complained that the song arrangements weren't satisfactory. The bandleader, tired of this constant criticism by a nonmusician, finally decided to assert his independence yesterday, summoned his secretary and started to dictate a letter notifying that he was relinquishing this $1,000 per broadcast job . . . "Dear Sir," he began, "I hereby submit my resignation and . . ." He turned to his secretary and asked: "How do you spell resignation?" . . . "With one g," she replied . . . "One 'g,' eh?" he returned. "That reminds me tear up the letter!"

Actress to Work In Spite of Cold

Against the advice of her personal physician, Phyllis Brooks, blonde film star, returned to work at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios after spending two days in bed at her home with a severe summer cold.

The beautiful young actress has the feminine romantic lead in the Ritz brothers comedy, "Straight, Place and Show."

She reported for duty still somewhat hoarse and weak but determined not to hold up production and thus, perhaps, delay the personal appearance tour through the East planned by the Ritz brothers immediately on completion of the current comedy.

Martin Rings Unionist Trial By 150 Guards

They Even Bar Defendants; Foes Cry 'Heil Hitler' at Labor Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 26.—Homer Martin and the associates he charges conspired with Communists to disrupt the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers aired their dispute today behind closed doors at U. A. W. headquarters.

Martin, international union president, marshaled 150 guards into eleventh floor corridors outside union offices to prevent interference as trial of four suspended vice presidents began.

The U. A. W. executive board room was so closely guarded the "defendants" twice were bared by guards because they lacked "passes" to their own trial.

When an official finally escorted them in, they marched between a long double file of guards, entered the board room and simulating a Nazi salute, greeted Martin with "Heil Hitler."

Maurice Sugar, their attorney, termed "a typical Fascist setup" theprotective measure taken after opponents of Martin's policies yesterday invaded the U. A. W. headquarters, engaged in fisticuffs and delayed the trial with a sit-down demonstration.

Anti-Martin men congregated today in a park across a street from the building, and heckled the union president as he went to lunch.

The vice presidents on trial, who were suspended by Martin June 13, are Richard T. Frankensteen, Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall and Walter Wells. A fifth suspended officer, George F. Addes, former secretary-treasurer who already had been tried, removed from office and expelled from membership, accompanied them into the board room.

Sugar said the suspended officers would mak ecountercharges against those now in control.

Martin in a broadcast address tonight charged there were "at least 20 known Communist party members" in the group that demonstrated for the suspended officers yesterday.

Lewis Hits Tydings As a 'Chameleon'

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—Representative Lewis tonight accused Senator Tydings of "chameleon-like changes" in his stand on the Roosevelt Administration.

"After embracing 80 per cent of the New Deal at Annapolis and Bel Air last week, my opponent again reversed himself at Frederick last night and opposed the Roosevelt Administration," the western Maryland Congressman seeking the Senate nomination in a campaign speech.

Lewis said an analysis of New Deal proposals for which Senator Tydings said he had voted "disclosed" that the votes were cast in the Hoover Administration.

1,000 Rush to Get Licenses As Beauty Board Begins Job

And so the District of Columbia Board of Cosmetology has been set up in the old police court building. Although it opened officially on Monday, yesterday was its first full day, and Mrs. Julia F. Crandall, its president, had her hands full.

In the past 48 hours more than 1,000 persons have applied for licenses to run beauty shops. Most of them are running them already—but now the board will require of each beautician that he or she receive a certificate of health from a competent physician. The certificate of the successful applicants will show that they are free from any venereal disease, skin disorder or any other contagious illness.

Next each applicant must take a written examination. These examinations will be held four times a year, at three-month periods, and the first will be in October. Meanwhile beauticians passing the health requirements will remain "status quo" until October.

Mrs. Crandall believes the District Board of Cosmetology is the answer to the ancient question of unhealthful methods and quackery in beauty culture. Already 44 States have had such boards, and the laws governing the Washington organization combine the best points in the laws of the several States.

She knows whereof she speaks, for a 67 she looks back on a long career as a beauty shop operator which goes back to Broadway in 1898, when the Gibson Girl was being born, and visiting her first beauty salons.

MRS. JULIA F. CRANDALL.

"Girls change little in their quest for beauty," observed Mrs Crandall yesterday.

"We waved their hair in the gaslit era. Today the work continues. But the idea of natural beauty has seized the American girl down through the decades, and that is why the American girl is the most beautiful in the world."

Assisting Mrs. Crandall on the board are Mrs. Ethel Beebe, treasurer; Mrs. Bessie J. Mercer and Mrs. Lilienne F. Cowan, secretary.

Strip Tease Girl Gambles Life to Avoid Body Scar

Chicago, July 26 (U.P.).—Ada Leonard, "strip teaser" par excellence, underwent a second blood transfusion today in her deliberate gamble with death for an unmarred figure as opposed to life with a scar.

The tall, brunette beauty refused to permit an operation when she was stricken with appendicitis 10 days ago. She still refused when the appendix ruptured and peritonitis set in. Ice packs were being used to localize the infection and feeding was carried on intravenously.

Ada rose to fame as a "stripper" who had a lot but showed only a little. "I do it refined and not as the garden variety burlesque," she says.

Two Hardy Babes Suffer but Little in 12 and 25-Ft. Falls

Within an hour yesterday, Charles Tripplett, 3, and Gordon Osborn, 2, tumbled 25 and 12 feet, respectively, onto concrete areaways at their homes.

In each instance their experiments with the law of gravity proved far less damaging than frantic mothers expected.

Gordon, who leaned too far over a railing at 803 First street northwest, was examined at Casualty Hospital and sent home.

W. Va. Firm Cuts Wages.

New Bids Invited For Park Meters

New bids on parking meters for the Capital were invited yesterday by the District Commissioners as they approved a revised set for specifications.

The new bids on providing 310 experimental meters will be opened on August 16.

Medical Corps Examination Set

The War Department yesterday announced examinations November 14 to 18 for candidates seeking appointments as second lieutenants in the Medical Administrative Corps to fill nine existing vacancies.

"Examining boards will be convened at convenient locations throughout the continental limits of the United States for the examination of candidates authorized by the War Department to appear before them," the announcement said.

Officials explained appointments will be given only to men between the ages of 21 and 32 who are graduates of schools or colleges of pharmacy approved by the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy.

Gaming Raiders Wreck Poolroom

New York, July 26.—Police Raiders wrecked with axes, sledgehammers and crowbars yesterday a third-floor poolroom which, it is alleged, was headquarters for bookmakers and a dice game. They arrested 27 men.

Political Conundrum.

Secretary Ickes has not been slow to see the advantages inherent in the President's assumption of dual identity.

In his radio address of June 24 Mr. Roosevelt laid down a fine distinction between his decision, as President, not to intervene in Democratic primaries and his right, as party chief, to do exactly that. Mr. Ickes, substituting on Monday night for a vacationing broadcaster, carries the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde tradition one step further. He endeavoured to make clear that he spoke not as a member of the Cabinet, nor as Public Works Administrator, but merely as a news commentator.

Apparently, then, it was in the latter capacity that he accused Senator Tydings of trying to "muscle in" on Mr. Roosevelt's popularity. The conservative Maryland Senator, campaigning for renomination in the Democratic primary in that State, recently observed that he had supported the "bone and sinew" of the New Deal program. This, said Mr. Ickes, was "a real tribute to the New Deal strength in the Senator's State."

It is, or should be, clear that this intervention by Mr. Ickes in the Maryland primary has great philosophical as well as political interest. That arises from the fact that there are now two Mr. Ickes and two Mr. Roosevelts, permitting no less than four possible interpretations of the broadcast by "Honest Harold." And all of these four possibilities must be reviewed before there can be any certainity as to just who said what about whom.

The simplest interpretation, of course, is that Harold Ickes, commentator, was talking about the popularity of Franklin Roosevelt, politician. This is what Mr. Ickes himself seems to believe. But were this the case, the incident should have had no publicity. For by no definition is the comment of a wholly amateur crooner on a party politician worthy of the front page. Moreover, Mr. Ickes pointedly referred to Mr. Roosevelt as the President, and not as the party leader.

Alternatively, Harold Ickes, commentator, may have been talking about Franklin Roosevelt, President. But here again the resultant publicity is unexplained. As a substitute for a vacationing broadcaster it is Mr. Ickes himself who is negligible, regardless of the exalted nature of his subject. And another difficulty is that Mr. Ickes in his broadcast referred to his part in the helium controversy, whereas in the character of news commentator he could have had no part therein.

A third possibility is that Secretary Ickes, Cabinet member, was talking about Franklin Roosevelt, politician. But this seems to be barred out both by Secretary and/or Mr. Ickes. He (or they) referred to candidates "muscling in" on President Roosevelt, not on Mr. Roosevelt. So the reference was not to Roosevelt the politician but to Roosevelt the President.

The only remaining alternative is that Secretary Ickes was talking about President Roosevelt, which is the conclusion that simple untutored minds would be prone to draw in the first place. That would have merited the publicity given and justified the Secretary's references to the President as President. But here again there is the difficulty of Mr. Ickes' specific denial that he spoke as Secretary of the Interior.

Logically, therefore, one is driven to the conviction that Ickes actually did not speak at all. Yet even that wholly cheerful conclusion is untenable. It is too completely out of keeping with the Secretary-commentator, in whatever aspect of his chameleon character he is envisaged.

Pendergast At Bay.

For several decades he and his henchmen have ruled Kansas City with an iron hand, and in that period have out-Tammanyized Tammany and out-Hagued Hague. Again and again reform elements have vainly sought to unhorse the highly efficient machine controlled by Pendergast, whose power has been felt not only in Kansas City but throughout the State of Missouri as well.

Such efforts have hitherto never had more than a temporary result. Not even the exposure by a Federal grand jury of ballot-stuffing on a large scale was sufficient to bring about the overthrow of Pendergast's rule. Though a purge of the voting rolls followed this exposure, Pendergast's ticket emerged from last winter's municipal elections with a majority of 40,000.

The challenge in next week's primary election comes from Pendergast's erstwhile ally, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, who is supporting a candidate for the State's Supreme Court bench deemed objectionable by the Kansas City machine. A shrewd politician and effective campaigner, he appears to be giving Boss Pendergast a bad headache.

Stark's victory in this fight would tend to undermine and possibly destroy the Pendergast power in Missouri State politics and thereby threaten the hold of the machine which, in the words of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, has been "so corrupt that it has made the name of Kansas City a byword throughout the Nation."

The British Intervention.

To an increasing degree during recent months the British government has been under pressure to take a firm stand on the Czechoslovak problem. It has been argued that a pledge by Great Britain to come to Czechoslovakia's assistance if the latter became the object of an aggressive attack by Germany would clear the air in central Europe. Germany, it is said, would probably think twice before embarking on a course of action that would automatically bring into the field against her a coalition that included Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia.

This pressure the Chamberlain regime has steadily resisted. The Czechoslovak problem does not immediately impinge on British interests even though it greatly concerns Britain's ally, France, who is the ally of Czechoslovakia. The farthest the London government has been willing to go, heretofore, has been to express to Berlin and Prague its concern and anxiety over mounting German-Czechoslovak tensions and to urge that the differences between the two countries be settled peacefully.

In agreeing to name a mediator whose job it will be to try and bring about a satisfactory solution of the Sudeten German problem, regarding which the Third Reich and Czecholsovakia have long been at loggerheads, Great Britain has taken the first concrete step directly involving her in the present central European crisis. Apparently Britain's frontier which some years ago Stanley Baldwin declared to be the Rhine has now been moved considerably to the east. For while, theoretically, the appointment of Lord Runciman as "adviser" on the Czech-Sudeten dispute does not bind London in any way, actually it creates a moral obligation on Britain's part to see that a peaceful settlement is reached as well as to prevent such a settlement from being upset by force.

Indeed, the very readiness shown by Premier Chamberlain and his colleagues to name a mediator in the dispute between Germany and Czechoslovakia arises out of the realization that Great Britain is vitally concerned with central European developments. Rather than allow herself to be placed at the mercy of events and, willy-nilly, to be forced to act at a time when it may be too late to take a constructive stand for peace, Great Britain now hopes to ward off danger to herself and to Europe by bringing Germany and Czechoslovakia together in a peace settlement.

From this viewpoint Britain's move is to be welcomed. It must be pointed out, however, that having committed herself to this point, Great Britain is also under compulsion to achieve a German-Czechoslovak settlement at almost any price. That may mean a settlement at Czechoslovakia's expense and one which might easily weaken the capacity of that nation to preserve its independence.

The difficulty with regard to Czech-German dispute is that it may prove incapable of mediation. If it were simply a question of insuring to the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia a full measure of minority rights the problem could probably be handled with ease. It should be no more difficult of solution than the similar problem of meeting the legitimate demands of the Magyar minority in Czechoslovakia which, basically no different than that of the Sudeten issue, has produced no serious international repercussions. The real question at issue, however, is more than one of minority rights.

The well-founded suspicion exists that Henlein and his followers are merely tools in the hands of Hitler for the purpose of wrecking Czechoslovakia's independence and bringing that industrially potent country into the German economic and political orbit. If that is the case mediation can serve no useful end, for there can be no real mediation in a dispute between two parties when one of them insists, openly or covertly, upon the capitulation of the other.

Reductio Ad Absurdum.

Last February the Informazione Diplomatica, organ of the Foreign Office in Rome, declared that "the Italian government has never thought and is not now thinking of adopting political, moral or economic measures against Jews as such, except, of course, in the case of elements hostile to the Fascist regime." Today Italy is apprised that a series of laws will soon be promulgated to "defend the race against all contamination." That these measures will be primarily anti-Semitic is suggested by a remark of the secretary of the Fascist Party that Jews represent "the general staff of anti-Fascism."

Wholly aside from its abrupt about-face, the new policy would seem to be a confession that Italy's plight has become so desperate that Il Duce feels compelled to divert public attention from mounting external and internal difficulties by the time-tried device of a crusade. The Jews represent a mere one-tenth of 1 per cent of Italy's population, making the more ridiculous the excuse that Italians need to be protected from "non-Aryan infiltrations." For if there is any one national group already supersaturated with commingled blood it is the Italian. Beginning with the Greeks and Phoenicians who settled in Sicily and Calabria and the slaves imported from Africa by the early Romans, strain after foreign strain has been introduced into the peninsula ranging from the Goths and Franks of the Dark Ages to the Teutons, Normans and Saxons of later times down to the Spaniards, Slavs and Austrians of more recent days.

From one standpoint, however, Mussolini's imitation of Hitler deserves applause. Now, at long last, the full absurdity of "racism" is exposed to view. If "Aryanism" meant nothing when Hitler exhumed the word from an outdated anthropology, it means even less when applied to the Greco-Latin-Oscan-Celtic-Franco-Germanic melange which is the Italian race of today.

Seen In Reverse.

In his message to the special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature Gov. Earle ardently championed constitutional guarantees of the independence of the three co-ordinate branches of the State government—legislative, executive and judicial. Coming from one who called President Roosevelt's court-packing plan "the greatest advance for democracy in our lifetime," the Governor's solicitude for preservation of the American tripartite form of constitutional government is illogical, to say the least. If executive encroachment upon the judicial domain is justified, judicial invasion of the legislative and executive spheres of activity should likewise be regarded as a blessing.

Gov. Earle's sudden realization of the importance of following constitutional methods of procedure is easy to explain. The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has refused to interfere with a proposed grand jury investigation of criminal charges brought against the Governor and others close to his administration. As an executive directly threatened by this effort of the judiciary to probe into his affairs, the Governor is undoubtedly much better able now than formerly to appreciate the importance of preserving the integrity of each branch of the Government against attempted usurpation by co-ordinate branches.

When the Supreme Court reorganization plan was before the country, many New Deal supporters reasoned that the end sought justified the means. Hence, they refused to be impressed by the gravity of the constitutional issues involved in the now historic court conflict. In the present case, there is also danger that the importance of the constitutional questions raised in the Governor's message will be forgotten in the heat and passion of an embittered political contest.

The Governor's political foes of course would prefer that the charges brought against him and his supporters should be subjected to the scrutiny of the grand jury. With strong arguments to support his denunciation, the Governor asserts that this proposed investigation is the outcome of a "shameless political conspiracy engineered by the Republican leadership in Pennsylvania." He and his friends, therefore, prefer that the Legislature, which is overwhelmingly Democratic, should be selected to inquire into charges of graft. Obviously neither the grand jury nor the Legislature will afford a full, impartial presentation of relevant facts, if the investigators distort or suppress the evidence.

The Governor's message deals with the method of procedure, however, not with these questions of political motive. And he has raised some very significant questions as to the possible consequences of permitting the courts to authorize sweeping inquiries into the operations of the executive establishment when the constitution has provided for legislative investigations. The Governor says that he is not seeking for public officials charged with crime any immunity "from the normal processes of law, arrest, indictment, trial and punishment." Nor does he wish the inquiry to be dropped. Instead he summons a special session of the Legislature to look into the charges.

In view of Gov. Earle's record on the court bill, it is impossible to take very seriously his protestations of regard for the sanctity of constitutional guarantees. But neither the motives which prompted him to call the Legislature in session nor the illogicality of his conduct should be permitted to minimize the importance of the issues which are now being fought out in Pennsylvania.

"Wish You Were Here."

Washington, D. C.
July 26, 1938.

Dear Bill,

These last few days we've been thinking a good deal about you down there in your cottage on the Bay. As a matter of fact, we've been thinking about the Joneses up in the Blue Ridge, too.

Here in the city ("X" marks our office) it's been wet outside, all right, but dry and comfortable inside. Fact is this rain has been a blessing—it's been so cool at night that we've even been sleeping under blankets. As for food, we've rarely eaten as well due to the fact that so often we've had to linger in the lunchroom until a shower had passed. And we've met some of the nicest people standing under awnings like ourselves until their bus or streetcar came along.

No soggy bathing suits, no mildew in the bread box, no mail to be fetched from the box down at the road. Nice movies in the evening, or our favorite armchair by the radio, or even perhaps a quiet rubber of bridge with the people upstairs. Wish you were here. Bet you do, too.

Sardonically, JOE.

Third Term Possibilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The question of the nomination of President Roosevelt for a third term is mainly a problem of tactics.

There are two important ifs involved: If the progressive forces of the Democratic Party have a sufficiently large majority in the Democratic national convention of 1940 to name a candidate for the Presidency as definitely committed to social welfare policies as Mr. Roosevelt himself and defeat the combination that will endeavor to nominate either a straight-out reactionary or a reactionary disguised under a veneer of moderate liberalism—that's one of the ifs. If such a progressive Democratic candidate will be strong enough to win the election in the face of the terrific drive that will be made by big business to defeat him—that's the other if.

If it is reasonably probable that a man of the progressivism of Robert Jackson or Harry Hopkins or Pepper or Minton or other able men I could name, can be elected, no doubt the President will refuse a nomination.

If this is not reasonably probable—if the danger of reactionary victory at the polls seems too great—it will be the inevitable logic of a crucial situation for the party to run Roosevelt for a third term. In such a circumstance, all the forward-looking elements of the Nation should solidly back him as the spearhead in the warfare of the people against exploitation.

The bugaboo about the menace of a third term for a President is the quintessence of poppycock. There is no more reason why a President in which the Nation has confidence and who can be depended upon to continue a battle that is not yet won should not be chosen a third time than why a Governor should be limited to two terms. It is purely a question of what tactics are advisable under exceptional circumstances.

Views On Socialized Medicine.

To the Edietor of The Post—Sir: Concurring in the opinion of Rugged Individualist in your issue of July 23; I, too, would carry a banner in the parade against socialized medicine.

Next to mothers, doctors are the finest, most unselfish and most understanding class of people there is, and to attempt to "regulate" their work would be a grievous mistake. Their ethical standards are as high as those of the ministry, and their insight into human nature is as sympathetic and constructive.

As the mother of a large family, I have had much acquaintance with doctors of both sexes, and I have never known one to fail to give the most painstaking service, even when he knew that he might have to wait indefinitely to be paid, or perhaps never be paid at all. I would rather take my chances with an independent doctor than a socialized machine.

I had a cook (in more affluent days) whose baby was very ill with pneumonia, and the doctor came out 3 miles from town, in bitter winter weather, two and three times a day, and worked over that baby just as faithfully as I ever saw him work over one of my own children, and he was never paid a cent. The child's mother, I am sure, would be a staunch advocate of socialized medicine. She never had any money to pay doctors—she spent it all on clothes.

It was not the physician's charges, but the high cost of hospitalization, that often put needed care beyond my reach. The doctor was always willing to meet my circumstances with a nominal charge, but unless I tangled myself up in enough red tape to strangle the whole family, I had to pay (always in advance) the prevailing price at the hospital, because hospitals have been turned into machines, but the doctor has remained—up to the present, thank heaven—an individual.

I can not think that these doctors, who give themselves and their services so generously, should be turned into the salaried henchmen of dictated policies.

A. L. P.
Alexandria, Va., July 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter signed "Rugged Individualist," criticism of socialized medicine based on an unfortunate experience of the writer's friend appeared in The Post.

The criticism was that physicians paid by salary do not have the same interest in their patients as those paid by fee.

In my opinion the character of a physician is the same regardless of whether he is paid by salary or fee. A physician who is devoted to his work and respects the ethics of his profession is going to have that attitude whether salary or fee paid. Likewise a man who considers his profession an unpleasant way of earning a living will have that attitude whether paid by salary or fee.

On the other hand, there are definite benefits for both doctor and patient in socialized medicine. The physician does not have to give the most expensive treatment in order to maintain himself with some degree of respectability, but can give the best though perhaps inexpensive treatment because he does not depend on the fee for his bread and butter. Naturally the patient benefits here and likewise from the financial viewpoint.

If an unexpected illness or injury disables him or a member of his family medical care will be provided without the terrible drain upon his checkbook that usually accompanies such misfortunes.

THOMAS COOK.
Silver Spring, Md., July 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To regiment our doctors and socialize medicine on a national scale while the Nation is in the grip of the present political fanaticism is to a thinking and observing person the height of folly.

One thing stands out plain, and that is, politics is attempting to lay its hands on the lives of individuals. For the present attempt to regiment our doctors and socialize medicine is nothing more than an attempt to make a large percentage of the people take the part of guinea pigs.

It is clear to all that no person is going to pay to have a doctor experiment upon them. Therefore, it is the person who does not pay who shall have this pleasure and dignity. They cannot tell anyone how they should be treated; they are not supposed even to express a wish. They accept the dole of castor oil without a murmur or grimace. If it is more than flesh and blood can stand and a groan escapes, he or she is told to shut up and like it or get out.

The people had better study, think and speak about this thing before it has gone too far, for the people whom it will affect and make suffer are the ones whose voices are never heard beyond the walls of their sick room. Such matters as these are not easily controlled when once they get started and the people become weary in its clutches, and we had better let our wishes be known in an unmistakable manner before it is too late.

Tree Spraying Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through the courtesy of the tree-spraying department of the District of Columbia we have just received our annual spraying. By "we" I mean our automobile—fresh off the wash rack yesterday—the furniture and rugs in our front rooms, and all the windows in the front of the house.

As for the automobile the chemicals don't seem to hurt it very much and it does help the business of the automobile washing industry.

But it does appear to me—and I can speak as an expert after taking my thirteenth annual ducking—that there is vast room for improvement in this tree-spraying system. The housewives will bear me out in this respect, particularly on wash days.

Washington isn't the only city to spray its trees. But other cities have more consideration for their residents. Detroit sends a man 15 minutes ahead of the spraying machine. It is his job to warn every resident of the block that the sprayers are coming and that automobiles should be moved and windows in homes closed. Also it is his job to close the windows of parked cars, provided the doors are not locked, saving car-owners huge sums in upholstery bills.

No warning is given here by the District officials. The American Automobile Association has taken on its shoulders the job of tacking warning notices to trees, but sometimes these cards are posted weeks in advance.

BURLEITH VICTIM.
Washington, July 25.

Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the passing of Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, the poor and the needy of the District of Columbia have lost a great friend. As a devoted wife, her sympathies swept no narrow horizon but went far beyond to the lame, the halt and the blind.

As one interested in the affairs of the Community Chest, I was highly privileged to have known this great lady; to see her heart in action wherever the duty of charity called her. Quietly, undramatically, in simplest fashion, for years unsparingly she gave her fullest measure of devotion to the unfortunate. With her, the wholesome things of charity were a veritable passion. Her goodness and her kindness helped to warm hearts where hopes were low.

Here was a great woman, a great soul, who had "a tear for pity and a hand open as the day for charity."

View Of Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mexico has been a sucker for greedy nations which have been exploiting it for years. They put a strangle hold on the best oil and mineral properties by offering tempting bribes to thieving officials. Occasionally an honest man is elected, who awakens to the fact that something is wrong. He tries to something is wrong. He tries to make right the wrong. He educates the ignorant, telling them they have been robbed for years. The Mexican people believe they have found in Cardenas a savior who will line their stomachs with food, protect their country from bandits and teach them modern ways to live.

Foreign nations object. They honestly believe it is unfair to rob a robber. The foreigners long years ago received ample pay for their original investments and with high interest.

Kidding The Showboat.

NOW, what's this, Capt. Seymour—are you kidding the showboat? You call yourself the original floating theater, but you must mean you were originally the floating theater. For I've seen the showboat on the Potomac, the Rappahannock and the James, and it never was anything like your latest offering. You've been in the show business long enough to know what I mean when I say your sophisticated performance of "Young Love in Valley Center" the other night was a travesty.

If I want sophistication I can go to the National—or, for that matter, I can talk to the telephone girl. Sophistication is a dime an hour these days, but the showboat ties up at our wharf only once a year. It's our only chance to see the homely virtues portrayed and the basic villainies exposed as they ought to be. Why, I was astounded, Capt. Seymour; your actors the other evening were making fun of both virtue and villainy!

Don't get me wrong, Capt. Seymour, I know it's stylish. But it isn't showboat style. Leave that to Ye Olde Redde Barne and Ye Crosse Roades Theater. Let them make fun of the drama we country folks like, and feel superior; that's good enough for the summer people, who haven't got anything better to think about. When we take our seat in the showboat, though, we want the hero to have his boots on and ready to ride, and no foolishness about it.

* * *

I am not forgetting, Capt. Seymour, that "Young Love in Valley Center" was billed as a farce. Well, it really was funny, I'll give you that. But as for being a farce—Capt. Seymour, the showboat taught me all I know about the theater until I went away to prep school, and it hasn't yet escaped my recollection: A farce is a play in which somebody, sooner or later, throws a pie.

But what do you give us? Let me refresh your memory. "Young Love in Valley Center," we'll both admit, has a good showboat plot. The hero has some substantial name like Bill, and he wears blue grease paint all the way around his eyes. The beautiful heroine, who looks a little older than she is supposed to be, is in danger of marrying the local hypocrite. Brother has run with a fast crowd in the big city, earned contempt for small-town ways, and got himself into trouble. Pa, a loud-voiced old duffer with a lot of horse sense, is the comedian who carries the show.

Well, the hero makes a big sacrifice, and disappears under a cloud of suspicion. Of course, he shows up in the nick of time with the heroine's brother, whom he has helped to reform, and clears himself and everybody else except the villain.

So far, I haven't a thing in the world to kick about. It's not the plot, Capt. Seymour, but the lines and the action that make "Young Love in Valley Center" an offense. The play kidded itself all the way through, and the actors kidded the play and the showboat. The gags were good and some of them were new, but they derived mostly from the theme, "We know we're not so hot!" That will never do, Capt. Seymour—the showboat should be no more open to challenge than an oracle. But still I could have stood for all that. It was the pay-off, the denouement, that convinced me the showboat had been betrayed. Right before the final curtain, when your mustacheless villain is cornered, and when he has made his impassioned speech about never being taken alive, he pulls out a bean shooter and begins to snicker. That's farce, all right—taking the old showboat for its last ride.

Now, I won't put the whole blame on you, Capt. Seymour. You're a showman, and you've canvassed around until you've discovered what your audiences will be wanting this year. It isn't your fault some of my old neighbors have got a little above themselves. It isn't your doing that they've been listening to the radio and acquired a tin-can sophistication.

I suppose we can't blame them so much, either, for the fact that they can't evaluate that sort of thing properly. Most of them have found some way of making a living without going to town, and so they have not been forced to contend with sophistication in stenographers, bell hops, elevator boys, waitresses, salespersons, panhandlers and race-track touts. Only by a long and weary contemplation of these city people, I reckon, could anyone arrive at an appreciation of how much more romantic, how much more touching, how much more engaging and exciting as well as more enduring, are those homely virtues and basic villainies of which I have spoken.

There is excuse, then, for both you and them—but not happy prophecy. I look for a certain deterioration in the lives and characters of my old friends unless they are big enough, while learning the way the world is run today, to recognize the immemorial human actualities. They show themselves smaller and meaner when they enjoy seeing your actors kid the showboat.

As to whether I'm serious about all this, Capt. Seymour, you'll have to draw your own conclusions. But I'm an old customer, and I'd advise you to think twice before ignoring my request that when your scow ties up at Potomac Beach next year, your villain shall wear a black mustache.

Fascism's Sporting Code.

THE ITALIAN FOOTBALL FEDERATION has fined the Ambrosiana Club, holder of the national championship and defender of Fascist honor and prestige, for doing a Guadalajara in a contest with the Jugoslavs. The Ambrosians lost, 2 to 0. As punishment they will have to pay 5,000 lire. They also have been forbidden to play outside Italy, where foreigners might see them and receive an unconvincing impression of Fascist invincibility, until September 30. By that time, if they have improved sufficiently or acquired ringers of the proper class, the association will consider the advisability of taking another chance with the Ambrosianas.

PEGLER.

The fining of amateur athletes for failure on the field will seem grotesque to Americans, who have often accused themselves of overemphasis on sports but have never regarded an athletic defeat as a national calamity or a victory as a triumph for the state.

The Fascists and Nazis take a more serious view, however. The Fascist football clubs are part of the regime, and players who go abroad to represent Italy must come back with their shields or on them. They bear a heavier responsibility than the sportsmen of the free nations—a fact which may account in part for their extraordinary touchiness and their rather frequent violations of the generally accepted sporting code.

• • • •

IN THIS COUNTRY a few years ago it was discovered that college baseball players were operating under the rules drawn for the professional game and were technically liable to be fined for breaches of training or discipline.

There was no likelihood that any college coach or captain would attempt to invoke this rule, but, nevertheless, the colleges decided to eliminate it from their book on the ground that a player who stood to gain no money by competing well should not stand to lose money by competing badly.

The Fascist prestige has been a distinct handicap to Italian sportsmanship on several notable occasions. Intended to act as wings on their heels—and Fascist sport has produced some notable heels—it has often served as a heavy burden when the invincible sportsmen felt they had to win or go home in disgrace. Under the Fascist code it is a disgrace to lose fairly and gallantly but an honor to win by any means.

• • • •

THE CHIVALRY by which the decadent democracies set so much store was abandoned early in the reign of the Duce, when a gallant gesture brought unpleasant results. On that occasion an Austrian soccer team from Innsbruck beat a Fascist team from Milan, and the Milan club thought it would be pretty to send the Austrians a substantial token of friendship. The Milanese were long on chivalry but short on tact, however, for the token took the form of an enormous cast-iron statue of Mussolini which was shipped F. O. B. Milan.

Not only was the Innsbruck team too poor to pay the freight, which was considerable, but a statue of Mussolini, who had forbidden the native Tyrolean yodel among the captive Austrians in Italy, was the very thing that all Austrians wanted least. For a combination of both reasons the Innsbruckers refused to accept the monument, which lay on a flat car in the freight yard, running up charges, and wired the Milanese to send up and get it. They said they considered the statue an insult, and the Milanese said this telegram was an insult to them.

This threw the Milanese into a great fury, and it looked as though the wretched Innsbruckers would have to load cast-iron Mussolini into guns and shoot him back a little at a time, until a nameless peacemaker hit upon a happy solution. The Innsbruckers ordered a foundry to cast a set of whiskers for the statue and charged the detested Mussolini into the beloved Gambrinus, the inventor of beer.

Later, however, the Viennese team had the ill manners to beat another group of Fascism's invincible defenders, and this time the press of Rome took up the outrage frankly as such. Chivalry was for the weak and decadent and not for those who live like lions, and the press of Mussolini's Rome openly threatened to block at loan to Austria which was then under consideration by the League of Nations.

• • • •

IN THE LAST Olympic Games in Berlin Mussolini's invincibles ganged a referee during a game with the Americans and clapped their hands over his mouth so that he could not speak to expel an invincible from the game for fouling an American player. And nobody who was present will forget the cutlery shower which descended from the galleries in Madison Square Garden the night that an American boxer badly defeated the Fascist flyweight champion, Edelweiss Rodriguez, who threw himself on the floor and screamed at the decision, but like a lion.

These episodes are trivial to the victors, who usually are able to win without undue exultation, but they are little Guadalajaras to the Duce, and the Ambrosiana Club has been guilty of a grave betrayal of a sacred trust.

Imaginary Interviews.

Q. Mr. Roosevelt, in the interests of candor—

A. Now, don't be old-fashioned, please!

Q. Can you be frank?

A. Can I be? I am Frank.

• • • •

Q. Let us be perfectly honest and not in the least evasive——

A. Ah! Spoken like a true Democrat! Now we can proceed.

Q. There is great speculation all over the country as to whether——

A. Whether I caught any wahoo?

Q. No; the Nation wants to know one thing——

A. Whether the business recovery is genuine?

Q. The question is this: Will you run for a third term?

A. I stated my position on that a long time ago.

Q. You heard my question——

A. You are not intimating that I didn't mean what I said, I hope.

Q. No; what I am worried about is whether you said what you meant in view of developments since you meant it. Do I make myself clear?

A. No.

Q. That puts us both in the same boat.

A. Don't put me in any boats; I'm sick of 'em.

• • • •

Q. We're not getting anywhere. I'd like a frank statement on this third-term stuff.

A. The precedents are absolutely against any President taking a third term. Does that answer you?

Q. Certainly not.

A. No President has ever run for a third consecutive term.

Q. That leaves me still in the dark. I repeat, will you accept a third term?

A. Who said I would?

Q. Who's asking these questions, you or I?

A. What difference does it make as long as we get no definite answers?

• • • •

Q. Please, Mr. Roosevelt, how do you stand today on the matter of three terms in the White House?

A. In the hands of the wrong man it might be very dangerous.

Q. But how can the voters tell the wrong man from the right?

A. They have radios, I hope!

• • • •

Q. Mr. President, I thank you for this interview.

A. It clears up everything, does it not?

Q. Everything except whether you would consider 12 years in the White House. Well, bood-by. I'll see you at the next Democratic convention, will I not?

A. And how!

Rome-Berlin Axis

Observer Doubts Reality Of Rome-Berlin Entente, Citing Himmler's Memorandum Scoring Weaknesses Of Fascism.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

RECENT EVENTS in Europe have been of such nature that they do not seem credible, and yet, unless all my information concerning them is wrong—and thus far it has been uniformly right—the gods are at work bringing madness upon the men whom they wish to destroy. The one marked out especially for destruction is Benito Mussolini.

The Rome-Berlin axis is an unnatural alliance from every standpoint—historical, economic, financial, strategic. One recalls how Italy, only three years after the forming of the Triple Alliance with Germany and Austria-Hungary, entered into a treaty with Great Britain releasing her from any obligation to fight against that country. One recalls how, two years after that, Italy abandoned her treaty partners at the Algeciras conference and announced that she regarded her interests as identical with those of Britain. And still eight years later she came into the World War against her former allies.

Italy has virtually no raw materials, Germany but a few. They can be had only from Britain, France or Russia. Italy, Germany, and also Japan, the third partner in an unholy alliance, are all dead broke. It would be as impossible for Italy to get a loan from either one as it would have been to get a loan of a million from Samuel Insull last June. Britain's Mediterranean fleet alone could bottle Italy up and starve her to death. The whole complex of factors is such that it reduces the Rome-Berlin axis to one of the greatest absurdities to be found in history.

German Police Sent To Rome Before Hitler.

BEFORE HITLER visited Mussolini several hundred German police and members of the Gestatpo (secret political police) were sent to Italy to help round up persons who might be suspected of not loving Hitler as greatly as could be desired. At their head was Heinrich Himmler, head of both the Gestapo and the regular police. On his return to Berlin, after spending eight weeks in Italy, he set down his impressions and recommendations in a report to the war ministry and the foreign office.

This report pictured the whole situation of Italian Fascism as crumbling and rotten to the core. The Italian people, Himmler reported, were extraordinarily disgruntled by hunger and privations in general, and disquieted about the prospect of a war at the side of Germany. A remarkable spirit of defeatism prevailed, with criticism of the methods proposed for intensifying the dictatorship when war came. Mussolini's standing in the party, the Gestapo chief reported, had suffered considerably, and the hold of the Fascist Party on a part of the population rested much more upon Il Duce's prestige than on strictly organized force, which alone could guarantee discipline when the first bombs fell over Italy.

Himmler's executives and observers, he reported, had told him that there was a barely concealed current of opposition to a coalition with Germany, and that in case of a conflict which would bring Italy into the war as Germany's ally, this opposition was determined to appeal to the King and ask him to remove Mussolini. The same executives reported that of 12 Italian generals with whom they talked about an alliance for war, nine opposed it, and three-quarters of the prominent Italian citizens with whom they talked likewise opposed it. Among such opponents were the crown prince and Gen. Badoglio. The circle around the Queen, it was declared, took the same stand.

Himmler concluded that while Italian mobilization and war tactics could come into operation with lightning-like rapidity, Italy could hardly endure a long war.

Himmler Advised Nazi Police Methods.

HIS REPORT made two principal recommendations:

1. The sending of a German police expedition to Italy to help the Italian police, especially the Ovra (secret political police), to restore discipline along German lines.
2. The unifying of Italian propaganda, since its lack of uniformity, and especially the freedom which it allows the Roman Catholic Church, was responsible for the fact that general lack of faith in official statements exists. "The unpardonable liberal attitude of Italian Fascism toward the church is sharply to be condemned," declared Himmler.

Confirmation of this report came some weeks ago with the news that a police and military aid expedition of 48 men was already in Italy. At its head is Dr. Theodor Hentschel, head government counselor.

All this is more than interesting; it is deeply significant. For one thing only weak or vassal governments ordinarily accept such commissions as that now in Italy from Germany. Following the World War a commission of French military men helped Czechoslovakia organize her armed force, but it is easy to imagine what would have happened if that commission had tried to reorganize the government. And for another thing, recent happenings in Italy cannot be explained by mere coincidence except by stretching the long arm of coincidence farther than is credible.

Two weeks or more ago it was decreed by the Italian government that books written by Jews might not be translated into Italian, and booksellers were ordered not to display prominently books written by Italian Jews. And now comes the report of a commission of "scientists" who find that the Italians are "Aryans," with a thousand-year-old purity of blood, and that the Jews have never been assimilated and marriages between them and the pure "Aryans" should be prohibited.

A government counselor in Rome is reported to have given the assurance that the stamping of the Italians as "a pure race," and the declaration that the Jews have never been assimilated did not mean that any positive steps against them were contemplated. In view of what has happened recently, this assurance is open to doubt.

The Jews in Italy are reported to fear that the publishing of the "Aryan" investigations at this time, with the recommendation against mixed marriages, presages their eventual elimination from citizenship rights along the lines of Germany's Nuremberg laws. Their fears may well have been augmented by reports of the joyous acclaim with which the results of the scientists' study of the Italians' racial makeup were received in Germany. The German press featured the news as sensational, and declared that the new Italian doctrine was "in essentials" the same as the racial doctrine held by the Nazis.

Jews' Apprehensions Shared By Roman Church.

OBVIOUSLY the Jews' apprehensions are shared by the Roman Catholic Church. The Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, has again protested against anti-Semitism, and the Pope's statements in an audience given a few days ago were unmistakable. His Holiness emphasized once more that the Catholic Church is 'catholic," that is, includes all believers of all bloods. A papal legate once said to me: "We regard every baptized Catholic as part of the mystic body of Jesus," and that is the attitude of the church.

The Holy See may well be informed of Himmler's statement about "the unpardonable liberal attitude of Italian Fascism toward the church," which was "sharply to be condemned." It may well see in what has happened the menace of a coming struggle which will gravely affect both the Catholic Church and the independence of the Italian state. It may also recall the lesson which the Achaeans learned when, menaced by the power of Cleomenes, King of Sparta, they turned for aid to their former oppressor, the King of Macedonia. Cleomenes was defeated. "The Achaeans soon experienced, as often happens, that a victorious and powerful ally is but another name for master." (No. XVIII of The Federalist, ascribed to Hamilton and Madison).

Yet, despite all that is set forth above, it is still difficult to believe that the Rome-Berlin axis will prove a reality when war comes—unless war be postponed long enough to make it possible for the Nazis to subjugate the Italian people by torture and murder. That possibility cannot be dismissed out of hand.

Before what Alexander von Humboldt once stigmatized as "the depressing assumption of superior and inferior races" had become a part of Nazi and Fascist ideology, the great German encyclopedist, Brockhaus, wrote of the Italians:

"They are a typical mixed people (Mischbevoelkerung), come into existence through the taking in of numberless slaves in the Roman Empire, and through the immigration of the Germans in the north and the Saracens (Arabs) of the south."

Of Cheese

By

Edward Angly.

Cheshire, Cheddar, Stilton, Etc.

LAUGH AND THROW DOWN the paper if you want to, but our subject today is going to be cheese. Not the machine-made reminders of soap and rubber tires that clutter the grocer's counters in teenie-weenie jars and namby-pamby paper-bound cubes and triangles scarcely big enough to make a mouthful. No, not those standardized tidbits for standardized appetites. But rather those handsome, aromatic masterpieces of hand and heart that are glories of their regions, whose making is more an art than a manufacture, fine big cylinders of reddish, or golden, or greenish, or creamy hue whose sturdy proportions demand a large knife for the cutting. Such cheeses are to be enjoyed by the judicious not on a base of soda crackers, or biscuits, as they are called in England, but rather upon soft and crusty bread, not too long removed from the oven.

The best cheeses, as the best wines, are those of France. It was not long ago that the appreciative Gaul erected a statue to commemorate the contribution of Madame Harel to civilization. It was she who invented Camembert, and every epicure is her debtor. There are good and distinctive wines, good and distinctive cheeses, produced in other lands than France—y inclus les Etats-Unis. But with us the effort to standardize, to employ the machine, achieve "efficiency," has harmed the product of the vineyard and made of cheese making an industry. Few are the grocers in all the land with cellars properly equipped to provide merited shelter for maturing cheeses. Rare is the American salesman sympathetic to a gourmet's regard for such smooth and savory food.

In England, too, it appears, the art of making cheese and the taste for appreciating its better examples are on the decline. Machine-made importations from Canada and the United States are cheaper than the English dairyman's product. He is finding it more profitable to sell his milk for immediate delivery in bottles. About such mutations, perhaps, there is nothing to be done, but Sir John Squire has raised his pen, and induced other literate gastronomes to join him in the writing of a handsome book that makes my mouth water. It is "Cheddar Gorge, a Book of English Cheeses" (Macmillan, $3), wherein the glories of Cheshire, Cheddar, Stilton and lesser-known fruits of England's green and gentle meadows are sung as fittingly as others have chosen to hail the nut-brown ale or the roast beef of Albion.

SIR JOHN writes of Stilton, the king of English cheeses. It should, he rightly observes, be regarded, at the conclusion of a meal, as a full-sized course in itself and not as a trimming. One should, like the boy who wants pie for desert, leave room for it. "To begin a meal with hors d'oeuvres which is going to end with Stilton is not to whet but to waste the appetite."

The noble Cheshire, oldest of English cheeses, is the subject of Vyvyan Holland's contribution. For those who think Cheshire can be made anywhere it should be pointed out that the distinctive flavor of that cheese depends upon the rich deposits of salt in the Cheshire soil, which grows the grass, which feeds the cows, which give the milk, which makes the cheese.

Cheshire cheese, often known outside of England as "Chester," is ranked higher than Stilton by Maurice des Ombiaux in his book, "Les Fromages." It is, Mr. Holland is happy to remind us, "no food for weaklings, and is, it may be observed, discouraged by many dietitians, particularly when consumed, as Providence meant it to be, with bread. Bread and cheese, we are told, belong to different groups of vitamins or starches or sugars, or some such thing, and are vitally indigestible when taken together. But let us not heed such warnings, which are but the peevish vaporings of the jealous dyspeptic and, as such, do not apply to you or to me."

• • • •

IN THE CHAPTER on Cheddar, contributed by Horace Annesley Vachell, is a remark I wish our "manufacturers" of cheese would take to mind. "The best cheese—no matter where it comes from—Mr. Vachell points out, "is made at the right time of year, when the pastures on which the cows graze are at their best and richest. Cheese made from milk when the cows are fed on fodder is inferior. One can amplify this crude statement. Certain pastures are so rich in certain grasses that the farmers (although methods are identical) who own these favored meadows make more delicately flavored cheeses than their next-door neighbors." For "a dish of cheese fit for the gods," Mr. Vachell gives his aunt's recipe:

"Cut half a pound of Cheddar cheese into thin slices and put them in a stewpan. Add three tablespoons of milk and a gill of cream, the yolks of three eggs and the whites of two. Season with pepper and salt. Whip it until it boils—and it is done.

"Let your guests be handed squares of toast. Let the cheese be served in a dish. The guests will spread the hot cheese on the hot toast. The boiling cheese should be free from lumps, smooth as mayonnaise sauce and about the same consistency."

There are chapters on the lesser known English cheeses, a dissertation by Moray M'Laren on Scotland's solitary worth-while cheese, which is Dunlap (from Ayrshire only), and a good account of Irish cheeses by the learned Dr. Oliver St. J. Gogarty. Charmingly and generously illustrated with drawings by Ernest H. Shepard, the book is a handsome monument to what, let us hope, is not yet a lost cause. Oh, to be back in Fleet street with a goodly slab of Cheddar upon the plate and a rich ale or a burgundy in the glass!

• • • •

FOR THOSE who would rather read of choo-choos than of cheese there is offered, this week, another English importation, "The Railway Age," by Cyril Bruyn Andrews (Macmillan, $3). It is the story of England's first railroads, of the iron horses, the prejudices against them, the dire predictions of what would happen when man went breezing through the countryside at 15 and 20 miles an hour. The book is rich in drawings, photographs, cartoons, verses, old letters and other reminders of an age that dreamed of going a mile a minute.

Turns With A Bookworm.

GRANT SHEPHERD, the author of "The Silver Magnet," got his material for the book from living it, "30 years in a Mexican silver mine." . . . And he got his name direct from Gen. Grant, because his father was a friend of Grant and was the last Governor of the District of Columbia, by appointment from the general, then President . . . But Mr. Grant Shepherd now lives in North Carolina.

• • • •

ALLEN TATE has written a novel, "The Fathers"—something to look forward to for next fall. . . . We never care what opinions Mr. Tate may be expressing; he is one of the few writers whose style makes us indifferent to controversy, in the pleasure of reading. . . . We mislaid the Putnam "first century" sheet a week or so ago, but after 100 years, what's a few days more? . . . It isn't too late to repeat from it an anecdote dated only 1850, which begins: . . . "One day, into the office of George P. Putnam, walked Mr. Henry W. Warner, to deliver a weighty manuscript, the product of his eldest daughter, Susan, who, he explained, preferred to make her literary debut under the name of Elizabeth Wetherell. . . . The publisher took the manuscript home and got his mother to read it. It was such a long novel, he was dubious. But mother stood firm. "My son, if you never publish another book, publish this! Providence will provide."

• • • •

THE BOOK was that lachrymose and long-lived best seller, "The Wide, Wide World." . . . And mother was right; the first big order, which started it on its long career of popularity, came from a Sunday School. . . .

Kansas Faces Muddle Over Winrod Race

White and Others May Join Democrats if Revivalist Wins Primary.

Kansas City, Mo., July 26.—In the last week of the Kansas primary election race responsible Republican Party leaders have so much shied away from the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, Wichita revivalist, that if he should win the party's Senatorial nomination next Tuesday, a strange coalition would be in the making.

There are strong indications that William Allen White, Kansas editor, and many fellow Republicans and important Republican newspapers would go into alliance with one of the most faithful New Deal Senators, George McGill, Kansas Democrat and supporter of the President's Supreme Court bill, rather than see Winrod elected on the Republican ticket.

Importance An Enigma.

This is the result of the latest surprising manifestation in Kansas—the apparent importance and strength of a candidate who broke into the political field on his own initiative from a background of such radio speaking and pamphleteering as to rouse Jews, Catholics and Liberal Protestants against him.

Even Kansans do not know the exact importance to be attached to the Winrod candidacy.

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee and a Kansan himself, made public Saturday his unqualified opposition to Winrod.

White Buys Opposition Ad.

William Allen White personally paid for an advertisement in Kansas newspapers warning that "to nominate him (Winrod) we must defend his position as a peddler of racial and religious hatred—the Nazi position, in short," he enumerated the "handicaps" of Winrod, as the protest of colored citizens, the resentment of Catholics, attacks on the Jews and organized labor's charge that Winrod prints his books and pamphlets in a non-union shop.

Against Winrod are pitted Clyde M. Reed, Parsons publisher and former Kansas Governor who belongs to the Republican liberal wing and who gave Landon little help in 1936; Dallas Knapp, Coffeyville attorney and former State Senator who is more conservative than Reed, and the Rev. Jesse C. Fisher, former west Kansas superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

While the Republicans fight it out, Senator McGill is campaigning but is taking it easy, awaiting developments in his opposition. Democratic Gov. Walter A. Huxman will be in trouble if the Republicans do not tear themselves apart. Seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination are former Representative Harold McGugin, Charles W. Thompson, Lieutenant Governor under Landon; Payne Ratner, State Senator, and Carl Newcomer, former vehicle commissioner. Jonathan M. Davis, former Democratic Governor, will go into the final election as in independent. He will do no good to Huxman.

Goal Rate Boost Asked by Va. Rails

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Eleven railroads presented to the State corporation commission their arguments today for an increase in freight rates on bituminous coal between points in Virginia.

The Virginia Coal Operators Association and civic interests in southwest Virginia appeared in opposition to the proposed increase, which would amount to 3 cents a net ton on rates up to 75 cents a ton, 5 cents on rates between 75 cents and $1, and 10 cents on rates over $1.

The railroads said the proposed intrastate increase would parallel interstate increases granted by the ICC last year to expire at the end of 1938.

Director King Seeks 'Jesse James' Sites

Returning from the wilderness haunts in Arkansas and Missouri where Jesse James once rode, Henry King, Hollywood's flying director, piloted his own ship into Los Angeles last week after having been gone for two months.

During the trip, King searched for movie location sites in the Ozarks of Arkansas and around Sedalia, Mo., where Jesse James lived on a farm and first set forth on his career of banditry. Accompanied by Robert Webb, his assistant director, King talked with scores who knew Jesse James through stories told them by their parents.

King will take a company to Arkansas and Missouri early in September to film scenes in Technicolor for "Jesse James" on many of the exact spots where the famous outlaw hid from posses and where he staged his celebrated bank and train robberies. Tyrone Power will play Jesse James, and Henry Fonda, Frank James. Arleen Whelan will carry the feminine lead.

Flash Turns Down Screen for Study

She's 18 years old, pretty and has a good figure—but she turns down movie offers.

When Carol visited the set of "Blackwell's Island," Director William McGann offered her the part of Peggy's sister in the picture.

Carol demurred. She said she wouldn't be interested in any kind of a career until she graduates from school. She says the same thing every time she's asked.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

This column, on Monday, discussed the possibilities of the unemployed obtaining Federal jobs, bearing down particularly on what part the Congressmen play in the procedure.

We said frankly that all who go to the employment (federal) agencies with notes or other tokens from their pet Congressmen don't, of necessity, get jobs. We ventured that the Congressmen's letters of recommendation don't always work, because the Congressmen never intended for all of their letters to be effective. The Congressmen are chiefly effective in the plum business when they get on the phone or call in person on the hiring agent.

We considered that all, except the most naive, knew this and no response at all was anticipated. But, to our surprise and subsequent delight, a young lady called by to say that she knew exactly how the Congressmen performed and she was a trifle astonished that our remarks had been so innocent.

Constituents Vary

So for half an hour she talked; and in the most painstaking detail showed that all constituents are not the same in a Congressman's eyes. Constituents are different to this extent; some have a vast political influence back home. They themselves, or their sisters and their cousins and their uncles and their aunts, control votes. "Many votes," she went on, her eyes growing large under the expanding recitation.

And of these constituents the Congressmen quake over their turtle soup and after-dinner mints. It is for this group that the Congressmen leap to the telephone or make impressive personal calls on the hiring agent.

Now, the other group are just plain constituents—and for these the Congressmen write letters that have a form tone and syntax. These constituents are merely recommended to the attention and graces of the hiring agent—and the constituent is pleased forever and forever because his talents, capabilities, honesty and perseverance are recommended on stationery of the Congress of the United States of America. He may not get a job, but the ego has fed on the fat of the land.

"The public pretty generally knows all that?" we ventured.

"Yes," she said, "but the public generally doesn't know how ungrateful some are who have been helped to positions by the Congressmen." Now here was something interesting.

"Do you realize that some whom the Congressmen have gotten jobs never do a thing for the Congressmen? I don't mean they don't vote for him. Of course they do. I mean they don't go to his office and help him with his work. You see, a Congressman has a lot of clerical work to do, and his office help is generally inadequate.

"I don't mean to make a blanket indictment, but ever so many of them never go to the Congressman's office to give him a lift. They don't consider that he has to answer thousands of letters from other people who want jobs. They just forget their Congressman, after he has done so much for them. They should all go to his office and lend him a hand. I know that I do."

We made no comment to the lady, but will say here that Congressmen certainly move in mysterious ways their wonders to perform.

Notes

Comes in a gentleman to protest (as so many others are protesting) against his son not being permitted to see his efficiency rating. "We feel that it is to the interest of the office and ourselves to be notified by the rating officer as to the particular in which our work may not be satisfactory." . . . James Dunn Hufham is retiring August 1 from the Bureau of Traffic, I. C. C. A native North Carolinian, he spent many years in newspaper work and came to the Federal service in the War Department in 1917. In 1921 he was transferred to the I. C. C. as a traffic examiner, and within a few years was promoted to the position of rate clerk, which he now holds.

The Union Playhouse holds forth on Thursday evening under auspices of Agriculture Branch of Local 2, N. F. F. E., in the air-conditioned Agriculture auditorium. Films will include "The Building of Norris Dam," and "TVA at Work." Bob Mahoney will appear in a dance novelty, Helen Gilliaert in "Songs of Yesterday," and representatives of the Washington Animated Cartoon School will show how animated cartoons are made. The Playhouse now is organizing both an orchestra and a mixed chorus. They are inviting talent to string along.

Thorp To Quit Inquiry Post If Politics Cut In

Acceptance Makes Explicit Monopoly Study Must Be 'Objective.'

By the Associated Press.

Willard L. Thorp, Wall Street economist, has served notice that he will withdraw as director of the Commerce Department's part of the monopoly investigation if, at any time, politics or other extraneous considerations enter the inquiry.

In a letter of acceptance to Assistant Secretary Richard C. Patterson, who represents the department on the monopoly committee, Thorp made the explicit reservation, it was learned yesterday, that it should be "perfectly proper" for him to resign if ever the inquiry loses its "objective" character.

This stipulation called sharply to mind assertions of some critics of the Roosevelt Administration that the monopoly investigation would prove a "witch hunt," engineered to discredit business foes of the President in connection with the approaching Congressional elections. Directors of the inquiry have denied this and said they approached their task in an objective spirit.

Thorp is director of economic research for Dun & Bradstreet and a former director of the department's bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The department's share in the investigation is the correlation of business statistics gathered by NRA and a study of the relation of the size of companies within an industry to the stability of prices for products of the industry.

Meanwhile, in the Labor Department, statisticians under the direction of Isadore Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, were busy preparing figures on price levels, wages and employment, together with any relationship that might be shown to exist between them.

Va. Tech Allotted $730,228 by PWA

Secretary Ickes announced Presidential approval yesterday of a $730,228 Public Works Administration grant for the construction of four new buildings and repairs to others at the Virginia A. and M. College and Polytechnic Institute.

The construction is planned to relieve overcrowded conditions and to allow for the normal growth of the institute, located at Blacksburg, Montgomery County, Ickes said.

Norfolk, Va., July 26 (AP).—Mrs. Mae Friedman, 33, wife of Bernard Friedman, and their daughter, Helen Joyce, 9, were found dead today in the gas-filled kitchen of their home.

Detective Leon Nowitzky, investigator for the coroner, said he would suggest a verdict of murder and suicide. Mrs. Friedman reportedly was in bad health.

This pretty miss smiles on the sands of a Long Island beach club after learning that the readers of a nationally known magazine had selected her as a "typical American girl." She is Frances Donelson, and her home is in New York City.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

EXTRAORDINARY READER interest is shown in two problems recently discussed here—the one, on July 14, having to do with a young woman's readiness to take a married man away from his wife (despite the fact that they are shortly expecting a second child); and the other, of July 16, having to do with a 19-year-old girl's criminal abuse at the hands of a suitor who threatens her with scandal unless she continues seeing him. Out of a large, continuous volume of comment received on these subjects, four letters are chosen for publication today. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a single man, I wish to register a vigorous protest against the suggestion of "Charles H. A." that such women as "E. L. B." work their wiles on single men and leave the married men alone. What have we bachelors done to deserve such treatment? Like your many other correspondents, I completely agree with your reply to this girl who asked how her married lover could get a divorce from his wife who is with child. And yet, in fairness to a girl of perhaps not too great intelligence, should we not stop to ask ourselves where she got such ideas?

* * * *

Name me, right quick, a movie actress who hasn't secured a divorce in order to marry, within the hour, a boy friend whom she had been seeing on her husband's time. Look at the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, who didn't wait to draw a breath between the divorce of her first husband and marriage to her second husband and who now contemplates divorcing No. 2 for No. 3, whom she has been entertaining on No. 2's time.

* * * *

On the front page of today's (July 20) Washington Post is the news item that a Congressman from my district (indorsed by President Roosevelt), who divorced the wife who helped him through school to marry a nightclub singer, leads for renomination by a 3-2 majority. Does my memory serve me correctly that two children of our President had picked No. 2 before discarding No. 1? Apparently the public likes this type of person, judging from the heavy support he gets. These people make news, and because they are constantly in the public eye they set the standard for public morals. How can you expect much in the way of morality from the common people when our leaders in business, politics, government, society and entertainment set the standard they do?

For some time I have wanted to tell you that your "Court of Human Relations" column is, to me, the most interesting feature of The Post, because it gives us a chance to see what is perhaps one of the most interesting aspects of human life—namely, how other people think in a crisis.

COLUMN BOOSTER

What One Wife Did.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the column of comment from readers in today's (7-20-38) paper, with regard to certain moral aspects of a question recently put to you concerning "the eternal triangle," I am moved to add further remarks on the subject

I am not an immoral person, never have been and don't ever expect to be, and I think that insofar as it is humanly possible to do so, one should always strive for the right under all circumstances But I wonder if it isn't often easier to set a standard for others to follow on matters which have perhaps never touched our own lives?

* * * *

There was once a young lady who roomed in my home, who fell seriously in love with my husband. I knew beyond the shadow of a doubt that neither of them was to blame. It was one of those things that just happen, heaven knows why or how. I love my husband dearly and because I do I could easily understand why she, also, loved him. And being a woman, I knew how she was suffering through that love, which kept her essentially on the outside of his life.

* * * *

Many a wife in my position would have stormed the rafters; thrown the girl out bodily, and perhaps created all manner of scenes. But somehow I couldn't do it. I was brought up in a Christian home, where I was taught that to err is human; to forgive, divine; and that he who is without sin should cast the first stone. I had never been in the girl's position, but I mentally placed myself there and then considered how I should like to have been treated by the wife in such a situation.

* * * *

I talked to the girl as if she were my sister and pointed out to her as gently as I could how I sympathized with her and yet how hopeless her love was. She agreed with me on all points, yet she told me frankly that she loved my husband as she didn't believe it was possible to love anyone. Well, I couldn't blame her for that, and it certainly wasn't her fault that I had met him first. Anyway, the outcome was that I gave her sufficient money to re-establish herself in another city and today we are still friends, and I hear from her regularly. She never mentions my husband to me but I can read between the lines that she is still in love with him and that after several years she hasn't yet found the man who could replace him in her heart.

* * * *

Maybe you will say that I am a fool, but I don't think so. We are not always given the power to select whom we shall love, so I say that to those unfortunate souls who are caught in such a web, should go our kindness, mercy and help. We should condemn that which is wrong, but be lenient with those who do wrong, because but for the grace of God, we might be in their shoes. Vengeance is mine; saith the Lord, and who are we to judge and punish in His place? Besides, life often hands out a better retribution than we, as individuals, could devise. Why not leave judgment to Him who knows better how to solve such mysteries?

ANOTHER READER.

Asks Vengeance on 'Beast.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please publish this statement in your column: Words cannot express my utter contempt for the beast described in "Worried's" letter to you under date of July 16. Were I that girl, I should give all the facts to the district attorney and ask that official to take the matter up with the head of the Government department where the male in question is employed. I should never stop until I knew for sure that his name was permanently dropped from the Federal pay roll, for certain it is that he is not entitled to share in the funds of taxpayers. A person of his type is a menace to society. If this measure of retribution failed to carry through, I would turn the beast over to the girl's father and brothers—regardless of public outcry and the possibility of adverse publicity. There are many broadminded persons who, like myself, are willing to believe every word of this girl's story.

A. L. A.

Revises Opinion of Column.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past few years I have been reading The Post and recently have followed your column daily, but have not always agreed with the advice you give your correspondents. I had been inclined, at times, to regard you as a "bunk" columnist. But believe me, I am 100 per cent for you now. I never in all my 19 years heard of such a horrible, deplorable incident as that described by "Worried," in your column of July 16. Your instructions to see both a legal adviser and a gynecologist are tops.

* * * *

Your column is usually filled with a lot of complaining letters from individuals who think they have problems and who in reality are merely confronting some of the unhappiness life affords. But the anguish that "Worried" must have undergone before seeking advice would have driven the average 19-year-old girl to suicide or insanity . . . I can readily understand why she did not tell her parents about the man's attack, fearing that her father and brothers would not have been satisfied until they had killed him. Right now I would like to get my hands on him. I hope and pray he may be made to pay for what he has so cruelly done. Wishing you continued success and joining the midshipmen at Annapolis in voting you my favorite columnist, I am, DEEPLY INTERESTED.

For 'Going Places and Seeing Things'

HERE is an ideal outfit for the late summer vacationist. It's a three-piece green and white tweed with green leather stars on the jacket and bigger ones on the topcoat of matching fabric. It is suitable for train, motor or boat and was especially designed by Alex Maguy for "getting around generally."

Late Summer Vacation Outfit Ought to Be Pointed Toward Fall

Blouses Due for Popularity in the Autumn; New Accessories Will Do Much to Brighten Spring Things.

LATE SUMMER vacationists should plan their wardrobes with an eye to fall. If spring outfits are to do duty they may be rejuvenated with new accessories such as blouses, shoes, gloves, bags and hats. There are two schools of thought as to the best travel costume. One advocates a lightweight suit in a dark or neutral color, possibly in flannel or rayon suiting. The other insists that a print dress and a lightweight coat is the perfect answer to the "going-away" costume. If the suit is used, of course a lightweight all-purpose coat will have to be included.

Since blouses are to be very popular this fall the vacationist might rejuvenate her spring suit with a new blouse. Watch out for the bloused back which is the hallmark of the new silhouette. Bags are getting larger and larger, so a new fall bag might be a boon to the traveler. There are interesting new shoes in both leather and suede, many featuring the "draped" effect.

A new belt on a spring coat, a bouttonniere or a bunch of cut-out flowers at the belt would give a different effect. Paris is featuring clusters of flowers at the belts of coat.

Here are some vacation wardrobe tips that have been assembled by the Associated Press:

PLAY CLOTHES—A swim suit and a wrap to top it after your plunge; slacks and a shirt for lounging or sailing, and a play suit combining shirt, shorts and a skirt are the "big three" in sports clothes. They will provide you with virtually everything you need. A beach coat which matches your suit is smart this year.

WASHABLE FROCKS—Add one or two spectator sports frocks which will launder. A cool colorful print is good, too, for cocktails and informal dinners.

LINGERIE—Be sure you have plenty of lingerie and handkerchiefs, and be sure they match or harmonize with your clothes.

HEADGEAR—Include at least one felt hat, some eyeshade for your active sports and a bright kerchief or two to bind up your locks.

EVENING CLOTHES—Have your dance frocks colorful and inexpensive and top them with a bolero or brief angora sweater.

Your Figure, Madame!

Billie Burke Keeps Youthful Figure by Exercise and Two-Mile Daily Walk.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WAS IT 25 years ago that Billie Burke was the toast of New York? Surely, it was only yesterday! She looks just as lovely and almost as young as she did then.

Aside from the acting ability to lend reality to her roles, Miss Burke has the gift of creating the illusion that time is nothing at all. Men flock to her pictures because she brings back their youth . . . and women are grateful to her because she can make them believe that 25 years, even when added to their teens, is too little time in which to grow old and lose one's looks.

Men don't analyze the illusion—it's enough that they come away feeling younger. But women are consumed with the desire to know how she does it—and I have found out! In beauty, the magic results are achieved by sensible and simple routines, and first on Miss Burke's list of the things that keep one young is exercise.

Keep Supple.

You look and feel young only if you keep supple, she declares, and she never misses her setting-up exercises in the morning. A little variety keeps exercise from becoming a bore, and she stretches, dances and sometimes tosses a deck of cards over the floor and then stoops to pick them up one by one. By the way, you might try this game of 52-pick-up and see for yourself what it does to keep a waistline at 26 inches.

In addition to these exercises, Miss Burke walks 2 miles daily and, whenever possible, 5 miles. Proof of the value of such a program is in these perfect measurements: Bust, 37 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 37 inches. That's a youthful figure!

Never Fear Age.

Because it is so much easier to keep weight at normal than to get it there, Miss Burke believes no woman should ever permit herself to go above a certain figure. She eats the foods which help her to keep her weight at normal, and these are the same foods which protect vitality. This actress' favorite luncheon is a crisp vegetable salad with cheese, a glass of milk and melba toast. For dinner she likes a light meat, three vegetables and a salad. She doesn't throw the minerals down the drain—she drinks the broth in which the vegetables are cooked. Thanks to sane eating, her weight never varies from 115 pounds.

The present-day woman, according to Miss Burke, makes too much fus over the fear of age. "Fear brings age more quickly," she says, "and age should not be terrifying. Some of the world's most stunning women have long passed the age of 40. To them age adds charm and beauty in its true sense of the word."

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

New Nightie.

You are going downtown to the sales and pick up a cheap nightgown. Your old ones are getting frayed. And beginning to split at the seams. Every time you hear a fire bell in the night you vision yourself ingloriously descending a fire escape while the crowd below makes catty remarks about your nightgown.

Of course there are your good nightgowns—all done up in tissue paper in the silver boxes. Maybe you ought to get one of them out and begin wearing it. But which? Certainly not the one with the "Madame Suzanne" label . . . that was brought you from Paris! Nor the lovely one with the bolero and the handmade flowers that you got last Christmas. Why—why in a pinch it would do as an evening gown! You might put on the satin with the lace flounce—still it really would be a shame to ruin it . . . and you might need it if you went on a trip . . . And, anyway, satin is so hot.

No, you will go downtown, pick yourself up a cheap, simple little gown that will be cool and easy to launder, and that you wouldn't be ashamed to be—well, caught in on a fire escape.

* * * *

You make a forward pass through a huddle of women at the bargain counter. You come up with a pink rayon with purple hollyhocks, advance to the mirror and hold it up to you. Somehow it doesn't—well, match your personality. You try a white one with a conservative grapevine effect. The color is all right, but it looks skimpy. And too form fitting. Not at all the thing for a fire escape. One thing about your old nightgowns, even if they are down at the heels, they still carry some evidences of gentility.

You move to another counter where the nightgowns are $1 higher. Here are some lovely pink crepes and satin. Yet—well a little blah. Like pale puddings. Anyway, you are tired of pink nightgowns. Everybody wears pink.

Oh well, why not get a little batiste? They are genteel and refined. And awfully cool.

You examine the lower priced cotton nightgowns . . . hold them up to you. They seem stiff and coarse . . . like housedresses. And then there are all those jokes about the kind of women who wear cotton nightgowns . . .

The clerk brings some dainty linens, handmade and embroidered. They are soft as baby clothes. She gives the cost. You gasp. What price gentility!

* * * *

You desert the bargain counters for the regular stock. You go up another $1. After all, you might as well get a fairly good nightgown . . . in case you went on a trip or something.

A dainty print in one of the cases catches your eye. The clerk brings it. It is charming—a delicate peach satin with French blue forget-me-nots and blue piping. It has a waistline and a narrow blue ribbon sash. You vision yourself in it regally descending the fire escape. The women below cast envious eyes at you. Still—it is $3 more than you intended to pay. You look around again at the other nightgowns. "I'll take it," you tell the clerk.

* * * *

At home you unwrap it and admire it. You will put it on that very night. This is one nightgown you will NOT save!

Still . . . it does seem a shame to put on such a lovely nightgown in this kind of weather. And satin is so hot . . .

You get out your old nightgowns, look them over. They are not so bad after all. You could mend the lace on one . . . and get some new ribbon straps for the other . . . Yes that's JUST what you'll do! And put the new nightgown away until fall. It would be nice to have it if you went on a trip or something . . .

You rewrap it in its tissue paper, put it back in its box and set it in your drawer beside your "Madame Suzanne" and your two other fine nighties. Anyway, if there should be a fire—well you might have time to slip into it.

Lounging Robe Boom Seen in Television

New York (AP).—A bathrobe and lounging robe manufacturer sees happy days in the growth of television. "The advent of the automobile," he says, "brought a boom in men's street apparel for it took men outside of the home. By the same token, the coming of television, with air conditioning and polarized light, will boom home lounging apparel, for it will transfer activities inside again."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 26.

IT SEEMS that there is a small town up in Rhode Island called Newport. I believe the place is a sort of mausoleum of memories—of the days when America's Boodle Barons built million-dollar castles inhabited by odd-looking Baronesses with wasp-waists and bustles. Now, I learn, most of these vulgar monuments to the divine dollar are inhabited by mice and a few bats.

ALICE HUGHES

That's quite all right. Newport, as the die-hards will tell you, is a legend of America's "Let them eat cake!" days—long gone, thank Heaven. Yet even to this day the relic has a name among our dollar aristocracy, and several hundreds of them go to Newport each year to party each other, to snub the pushers, and to recline on the sands of Bailey's Beach in a refined way. I suppose the mildewed place still rates as the summer capital of American Snobbism.

But it is a heartening fact that the social veterans find it harder and harder to lure the young and pretty girls to that junk-filled attic of the native noblesse. Some uptown cuties, such as Eleanor Young and Jane Pope (a current belle,) make their debuts there, but the smarter they are, the faster they gallop away from the place. Eligible beaux are scarcer in Newport than are Giant Pandas, and alert young New Yorkers are miserable up there among the cobwebs. These cuties much prefer spots on Long Island, where the music plays louder and later, and there are more handsome lads on the sky-line.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of Newport (nihil mortuis nisi bonum!) It has suffered a tremendous commercial tragedy. That dear Prince George of Russia who used to charm the ladies in a big Fifth avenue department store opened a very nifty cocktail place in the town, but the pale-blue-blooded customers stayed away in droves, and the poor prince had to put up the shutters. He sailed away for Europe, perhaps in a severe pet. Now isn't that awful, when we won't spend a few dollars to help out a struggling Romanoff? Shame! Shame!

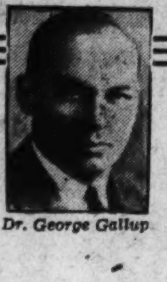
THE GALLUP POLL Has Achieved An Amazing Record for Accuracy



Dr. George Gallup

Election returns provide an excellent laboratory to test the accuracy of Gallup Polls. In the last Presidential election, the Poll showed Roosevelt winning by 56%. He was elected by 62%. The poll predicted Roosevelt would carry 45 States. He actually carried 46 States. In the Detroit mayoralty election the Gallup Poll was within 2% of actual results. Just recently the Gallup Poll in Maine predicted the primary election results with pleasing accuracy.

Maine Primary Tests Institute Findings

By Institute of Public Opinion

New York, June 25, 1938.—The latest test of American Institute of Public Opinion surveys came this week in Maine's Republican primary, in which Gov. O. Barrows met State Senator Roy L. Fernald for the G. O. P. governorship nomination.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE of PUBLIC OPINION

The Institute measured the standing of the two candidates for the Portland Sunday Telegram and reported on June 19, the day before the election:

Barrows	78%
Fernald	22%

Barrows	75%
Fernald	25%

In three years of measuring public opinion in national and State issues the American Institute of Public Opinion has made 60 separate State and local forecasts. The Institute has been right 54 times, wrong only six.

Discovering trends of public-opinion in a democracy that knows its own mind

The Way the People Are Thinking

Condensed from The New York Times Magazine

George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

During the last three years the American Institute of Public Opinion has interviewed hundreds of thousands of American voters in all walks of life, obtaining a true cross-section of popular thought.* It has asked their views on more than 500 questions of politics, government, social and labor problems, war, etc., and it has accumulated a mass of authoritative information on what the people are thinking. It has found that the typical American is remarkably alive to the issues of the day and highly articulate about them. If free opinions and an active public mind are the lifeblood of democracy, then the red-corpuscle count for this country is extremely high.

As many as 80 or 90 people in every 100 will normally express an opinion on most issues. Most of the comments are folksy and colloquial, but with an element of old-fashioned "horse sense." By and large, the majority of voters seem to have a ready ability to distinguish reality from sham. The surveys provide evidence to support Theodore Roosevelt's dictum that "the majority of the plain people will day in and day

* The accuracy of the Institute's sampling method has been demonstrated in more than 100 separate polls. Predictions have in many instances been confirmed by actual election returns, as in the 1936 national election when it conceded Landon only three states at most and came within six percent of forecasting President Roosevelt's plurality. In the 1937 Detroit municipal campaign, it came within two percent of predicting the majority vote for mayor.

Reader's Digest's choice of Dr. Gallup's "The Way the People Are Thinking" as the lead article for their June issue is typical of the national recognition being given to this premier fact-finder.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Crippy's Home-Coming.

Love requires naught of speech
Faith and confidence to teach.
—Old Mother Nature.

"How soon are we going to start to get that Coon at the animal hospital?" asked Sammy.

"Right after breakfast," replied Farmer Brown's boy. "I told Aunt Sally that we would. We will go down to her house first and get a crate she has ready for us. Then we'll go after Crippy."

So immediately after breakfast Tommy brought the car around and with Sue and Sammy started for Aunt Sally's. She had the crate ready. It was partly filled with the softest and sweetest of hay.

"What is that you have put in there with the hay?" asked Sue, peering into the crate.

"Sponge cake," replied Aunt Sally, trying to smile but with tears in her eyes. "Crippy was very fond of sponge cake. I used to give it to her once in a while as a special treat. You'll be very gentle with her, won't you Tommy?"

"You know I will," replied Tommy. "I'll drive just as carefully as if she were a human being instead of just an animal."

Tommy did just that. At the hospital Crippy was lifted with the utmost gentleness into the crate. There on the bed of fragrant hay she was made as comfortable as possible. Sue placed a piece of the sponge cake where she could reach it without effort. The hospital attendant shook his head sadly. "She won't eat," said he. "We've tried to tempt her with everything that we could think of, but she won't eat."

The attendant was wrong. They were not halfway home when Sue discovered that Crippy was eating that cake. Could it be that somehow she understood that she was being taken home? Could it be that her delicate nose found with that cake the faint scent of the loving hands that had placed it there? Anyway she ate it.

Crippy was carried into the woodhouse, and if there was any doubt that she knew she was being taken home there was no doubt whatever that she knew the familiar surroundings. The light of recognition shown in her eyes as she heard the low sweet voice of Aunt Sally saying over and over, "Coonie, Coonie, Coonie," in the greeting she had heard so many times as she peered in through the cat hole to make sure that all was well in the Night Club before entering.

Then she ate. She ate heartily of the food that had been prepared and drank the warm milk that was brought to her. Then she relaxed and presently went to sleep. It was plain that she suffered no bodily pain, and now that she was back in familiar surroundings with one who loved her and whom she loved, to minister to her, she was at peace and no longer in doubt.

"Do you think she will live?" asked Sue anxiously as they drove home.

Tommy looked grave. "She may," said he. "She may, but I don't count on it too much, and I hope Aunt Sally won't."

"But think how she ate when we got her home, and she hadn't eaten at all at the hospital. The man said so," said Sammy.

Tommy nodded. "That is true and it is a good sign," said he, then added, "but I don't know as I would want her to live."

"Why, Tommy Brown, how can you say such a thing!" cried Sue reproachfully.

"I was just thinking of those legs of hers. Supposing she shouldn't recover the use of them. In that case the kindest wish for her would be that she shouldn't live. There isn't anything more pitiful than one of these little folk of the Green Forest made helpless," replied Tommy.

Sue thought this over. "Of course you're right, Tommy," said she at last. "It would be dreadful. So let's hope with all our might that she will recover."

"Of course we'll do that. We would anyway," declared Sammy.

"We'll go over every day to see how she is getting along," said Sue. "Anyway, I'm glad Aunt Sally has her back even if it should be for only a little while."

"So am I," replied Tommy.

Joseph C. France, 75, Dies; Dean of Bar in Baltimore

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—Joseph C. France, 75-year-old dean of the Baltimore City bar and often mentioned in past years as a possible Republican nominee for the United States Senate, died today in the Johns Hopkins Hospital following an operation.

France, long regarded as one of the seniors of the bar, was voted the leader of the city's legal profession in an informal poll taken some years ago.

He is survived by three sons, Joseph France, Robert France and Dr. Richard France, and one daughter, Mrs. Ernest Caulfield, of West Hartford, Conn.

Marine Worm Could Bury All Mass. In Starch

Scientists Seek Substance That Makes Him Grow So Prodigiously.

By the Associated Press.

Woods Hole, Mass., July 26.—The discovery that one small, barely visible water animal can make, in 25 days, more starch and fat than the whole United States could eat, was described today at the Marine Biological Laboratory, summer workshop of American scientists.

The animal is chilmonas, a flagellate, so termed because he swims by lashing with fine, hair-like arms called flagella. Scientists got interested in him because, unlike virtually all other living things, he is able to make starch and fat without light. Starch and fat are two of the three essential foods. Protein is the other.

The amount chilmonas can make, said Dr. S. O. Mast, of Johns Hopkins University, is theoretically prodigious.

"For example," Dr. Mast wrote, "in one of our experiments, which was started with a single individual, and continued 25 days, if all the individuals had been kept cultured, there would have been at the end of the experiment enough to reach a total volume of 612,000,000,000 cubic meters.

"This is enough to cover the whole State of Massachusetts with a layer approximately 90 feet thick. The starch in this mass would have been approximately 19,000,000,000 cubic meters and the fat 6,000,000,000 cubic meters.

"This is sufficient to supply every individual in the United States with some 70 tons of starch and 20 tons of fat."

There is no sex in these animals. The original "individual" in the experiment increased the population by dividing into two, the two into four, and so on. In 25 days, at the normal division rate, in grammar school words, it would have been about 100 billion trillions of animals.

The chilmonas chemistry is the objective of the scientists. The little animal makes all this fat and starch out of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen, potassium, magnesium, sulfur and phosphorous. He does better with common calcium, but can get along without it.

Of more immediate practical importance than the dazzling food figures, the Johns Hopkins experiments have uncovered evidence that chilmonas makes a queer substance which causes him to reproduce so enormously, but which also has the power to stop his wild growth.

It is a two-way chemical, which has not been isolated.

This mysterious substance, Dr. Mast wrote "is obviously of the greatest importance in all problems concerning growth (including cancer), reproduction and sensecence, and doubtless has important bearing on others."

'Rudy Doesn't Love Me,' Bride a Suicide

Married just nine months, Mrs. Helen M. Vierbuchen, 20, killed herself with illuminating gas yesterday in her third-floor room at 456 K street northwest.

Father, Son Fall Into 90-Ft. Well; Die of Marsh Gas

New Westminster, B. C., July 26 (U.P.).—Police last night recovered the bodies of Thomas Graham, 50, and his son, Fred, 16, from the bottom of a 90-foot well where they were asphyxiated by marsh gas, as would be rescuers, not equipped with gas masks, failed to reach them.

Graham and his son were cleaning the well when the youth fell as a platform collapsed. He shouted to his father, who also fell to the bottom when he tried to aid his son.

Neil Jackson and J. G. Ingram, members of a crowd which gathered, tried to rescue the pair but Jackson was overcome and pulled to the surface unconscious. Ingram was pulled back before he lost consciousness.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING ON A STREAMLINED TRAIN.

From far away, Washington is a scene through the wrong end of opera glasses, tiny and brilliant . . . How they strut and shout . . . Like marionettes with strings reaching out to the precinct voting booths . . . At 80 miles this train cracks the whip . . . But I haven't cut myself yet.

* * * *

I'd like to turn a 200-inch telescope on it, a giant magnifying glass, a dentist's mouth mirror, one of those gadgets they focus on your tonsils, or a bronchoscope, a spectroscope, an X-ray . . . To show its heart fluttering, its intestines grinding, its stomach ulcers. Wish I had a new blade.

Harlan Miller.

Washington, the holy city, the Nation's city hall, the Republic's county seat; the Mecca, the Bagdad, Armageddon convenes at noon, Gethsemane in air-cooled offices, 50,000 stenographers as vestal virgins . . . The incoming baskets and the outgoing baskets, the lofty thinkers, the bland, patient, cynical politicians . . . Good thing I've got presents for the little imps this time . . . Or they'd scalp me.

They ought to paint a cyclorama around the Government triangle, murals on the inner walls of the House and Senate, like that one of the Western Front in Paris, to remind them of the folks back home . . . Last night I sang in a quartet with Al Jolson in the club car . . . And the b. w. says I can't sing!

No official can explain his goals, his philosophy in less than a 100,000-word book . . . A 3,000-word speech is always misunderstood. . . . The President ought to have a shiny, cheerful, train like this one, chromium plated like the New Deal, with an office car and a living car, designed by that Russian . . . Might not be good campaign psychology, though.

* * * *

Queer town, the Capital . . . To be comfortable you must be on the right or the left . . . "For me or against me." . . . No room for the liberal middle-of-the-roader . . . Even the President speaks scornfully of the "Yes, but—" people—the doubters, the civilizers . . . The liberals, the middle-of-the-roaders, straddle a sharp-spiked fence . . . They aren't gifted enough at uttering their scorn and contempt for the extremists.

Remarkable how instantaneously the President responds to the photographers—no nonsense, no coyness or archness; point this way, look that way, smile over here . . . He knows the camera can't distort or misrepresent . . . Or can it? . . . Thank goodness this isn't that slithery soft water.

Washington has a strong, healthy sense of rumor . . . Maybe Washington's rumors will be common gossip by 1940 . . . Or maybe 1950 . . . Or maybe next week . . . Byrd Linked As Entry on Lewis Ticket

Decision of Educator Seen by Saturday 'Positively.'

Nice Urges Ellison to Run for Congress; Tait Hits Weller.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—With but seven weeks remaining before the September 12 primary, Maryland's political campaign produced a series of developments today, including a new report by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, still a factor in the gubernatorial race.

Dr. Byrd, mentioned frequently as a possible gubernatorial candidate, popped up again when spokesmen representing him said his final decision as to his part in the primary would be made "positively" by the end of this week.

A conference, probably on Thursday, will deal with the possibility of Byrd entering as a gubernatorial candidate on a ticket headed by Representative David J. Lewis, New Deal candidate for the United States Senate, the spokesmen said.

Would Chop Jackson Link.

Should such a candidacy develop, it was added, the reported loose link between Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, and Lewis would be broken.

Dr. Byrd, steadfastly refusing to deny or affirm his availability as a candidate, has said that a "month or six weeks" would be sufficient time in which to wage a successful campaign for the primary nomination.

On the Republican battlefront, the developments included an exchange of Shakespeare between Gov. Harry W. Nice, a candidate for re-election, and Galen L. Tait, anti-Nice candidate for the United States Senate; an assertion by Tait that O. E. Weller, Nice adviser and G. O. P. natoinal committeeman, was playing ball with Democrats, and a suggestion by the Governor that City Councilman Daniel Ellison enter the Fourth District Congressional race.

Aids G. O. P. Front.

The latter development was interpreted by observers as an effort on the Governor's part to strengthen the Republican front in Baltimore. Representative Ambrose Kennedy, Fourth District Democrat, faces a primary fight against Francis A. Michael and Walter V. Wentworth.

Tait tossed a classical quotation at the Governor, claiming the chief executive was "annointed with nothing holier than the goose grease of sycophants seeking solacing favors." The Governor promptly dug into Macbeth for the following:

> "I am one, my liege,
> Whom the vile bows and buffets of the world
> Have so incens'd that I am reckless what
> I do to spite the world."

Cites Weller Support.

In another burst of politicoratory, Tait referred to the support given by Committeeman Weller to Judge Oscar Leser, the Administration candidate for the Senate, with:

It might be well to recall the last mayoralty campaign in Baltimore. Mr. Blanchard Randall, jr., was the Republican nominee. Many men well posted in politics have very definite ideas of what happened on the part of Senator Weller and others after Mr. Randall was nominated.

"The Democratic candidate, Mr. Jackson, was elected. Since then, the minority appointments at the City Hall have gone to Republicans who are friends of Senator Weller."

Cumberland Police Close 4 Bookmakers

Cumberland, Md., July 26 (AP).—Police Commissioner Harry Irvine said today that Cumberlands four bookmaking establishments had been closed "under my orders."

Irvine said he was "tired of getting all the blame" for their operations. "If they want to operate," he declared, "let the city enact an ordinance licensing 'bookies.' If they balk at taking out a license, let them take the matter to the courts for a ruling opinion."

Quit Senate Race or Resign From Bench, Foe Tells Leser

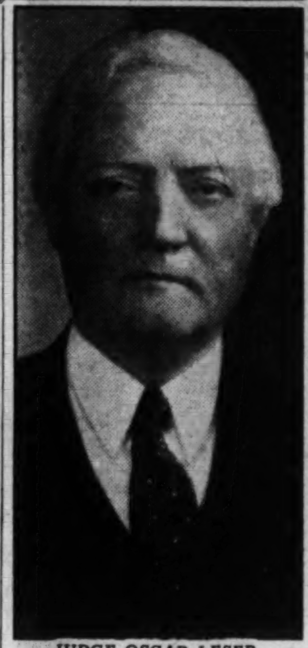
By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., July 26.—Leo Weinberg, of Frederick, candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination, asserted tonight Judge Oscar Leser, of the Baltimore supreme bench, should either resign his judicial post or retire from the Senate race.

Judge Leser, who announced his candidacy Sunday night, has been indorsed by Gov. Harry W. Nice and other Republican Administration leaders.

"It is part of the tradition of the bench as well as the ethics of the bar that judges should not participate in politics," Weinberg said in a statement. "Judge Leser's own associates, the sitting judges who are candidates to succeed themselves, do not campaign for their own reelection . . .

"Why does Judge Leser persist in being a candidate for office while he is sitting as a judge? Is it because he is afraid of defeat and the consequent loss of salary for a few months? If he lacks courage, and is unwilling to make any sacrifice, is he qualified for the high office of the United States Senate, where courage has always been a requisite and is especially demanded in these critical times?"



JUDGE OSCAR LESER.

City Will Seek PWA Aid for Hall Project

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 26.—Hagerstown will ask the Public Works Administration for a grant to convert the first floor of the municipal markethouse into a convention hall with a seating capacity of 4,000 persons. The city council voted last night to make application for the grant. The present market would be moved to the basement floor.

In addition to large conventions, banquets and other public meetings, Mayor W. Lee Elgin said the convention hall may be used for winter sporting events, including ice hockey. It has been estimated that the changes can be made at a cost of $40,000.

For several years revenue from the market, erected at a cost of $125,000 some years ago, has not met operating expenses and interest charges, said the mayor.

Hagerstown lack a convention hall with a seating capacity over 1,000, with the exception of the main exhibition hall at the Hagerstown Fairgrounds, an unheated building, which can be converted into a convention hall in the summer months. The Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia Elks Association, meeting here next month, is converting the exhibition hall into a convention place.

City council also has approved making applcaton to the PWA for a grant for buildng a new city hall at a cost of $351,000. If the application is approved a citizens' meeting will be called by Mayor Elgin to guide city officials in deciding whether or not to proceed with the construction of the new building.

Meanwhile a delegation of citizens appearing before the Board of County Commissioners today voted 12 to 1 against the construction of a new city and county building as a PWA project. The vote was taken after discussion lasting more than an hour. Efforts will be continued to obtain a more complete cross view of public sentiment.

Youth Accused Of Slaying Girl In W. Va. Tryst

Victim Run Over by Auto After Repulsing Attack, Official Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Williamson, W. Va., July 26.—Paul Chambers, 21, filling station attendant, awaited in jail today a hearing on a charge of murder in roadside death of pretty Emma Farley, 19, near Matewan.

Prosecutor Lafe B. Chafin, announcing filing of formal charge, said investigation showed Chambers "made some advances and was repulsed" and that the only injuries the youth suffered were scratches inflicted by the girl during the struggle against attempted attack. He termed the girl's death "a plain case of murder."

Chambers, son of a prominent Matewan merchant and school board member, was found apparently unconscious near the dying girl last Friday night near Matewan, shortly after the couple had gone for a ride in his automobile.

Chafin said the youth's unconscious condition was "unquestionably feigned" and said the girl was knocked unconscious in an undetermined manner during the struggle against Chambers' unsuccessful assault attempt. The youth then ran over her with his automobile, inflicting fatal injuries, Chafin asserted.

Md. Poultrymen Will Mix Politics With Trade Talk

Ocean City, Md., July 26 (AP).—Maryland poultrymen will mix their chickens with politics at this seaside resort tomorrow and Thursday.

Headed by Gov. Harry W. Nice, gubernatorial candidates and State legislators will be guests at the fourth annual summer meeting of the State poultry council, opening tomorrow morning with a full agenda of discussion topics relating to one of Maryland's largest industries.

The Governor is slated to address the council banquet Thursday night, for which Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, will be toastmaster.

Among the speakers tomorrow will be Sam Rice, former major league baseball player with the Washington Senators, who now operates a poultry farm near Ashton, Md., in Montgomery County.

New Forecast Of Rain Adds To Md. Woes

Further Crop, Highway Damage Feared After Week's Deluge.

Heavy Losses Reported in Crab Industry, Truck Farming.

By the Associated Press.

Lowering skies and the threat of more rain brought new headaches yesterday to farmers, fishermen and businessmen as they recovered from an unusually soggy week which left many Maryland towns with streets under water and caused extensive damages to crops and the crab industry.

John R. Weeks, meterologist for the Baltimore Weather Bureau, said more rain is expected from North Carolina. The deluge fell again on the lower Eastern Shore after a few hours of dry weather, and the soft crab industry reported increasingly heavy losses of the delicacy from a surfeit of fresh water.

Ralph Parks, of Jenkins Creek, said thousands of the softshell crabs died, that losses in some instances total 75 per cent of the catch, and the rain "has practically demoralized the industry" here.

Salisbury, which had 7⅞ inches of rainfall in the past week, was drenched again by squalls and a continual drizzle. Farmers said the abnormal precipitation would harm the truck crops, especially if followed by hot sunshine.

Highway and farm authorities in Delaware said last week's damages would be nearly $250,000.

Western Maryland towns had many streets under water and cellars flooded. In Hagerstown, the rainfall for July neared 3.86, the normal amount when spread over the entire month, but disastrous to roads and crops when it falls within a few days. More than 1¼ inches fell Saturday.

Frederick County residents asked the county commissioners to use part of the $40,000 emergency road repair fund to patch roads which had been swept by the rain.

Oakland, recuperating from flood damages which inundated the main street with 5 feet of water, and Cumberland gazed apprehensively on flood gauges. Cumberland's total rainfall for July is 5.83 inches, of which 3.75 inches fell Wednesday within two hours at the city filter plant, Charles Bruce, waterworks superintendent said.

Free Ball Games Political Rally Bait

Hot Springs, Ark., July 26 (AP).—Eighteen innings of baseball will be used to "sugar coat" two Congressional campaign speeches by Joe Morrison and Kenneth Coffelt.

Lloyd Adams, president of the Hot Springs club of the Cotton States League, said yesterday friends of the two Sixth District aspirants had "bought" the park for Thursday and Friday nights and the gates will be open to the public.

Morrison will speak before the Thursday game with El Dorado and Coffelt will do his stuff before a game with Greenwood, Miss.

Rites Held for Musician Believed Hit-Run Victim

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., July 26.—Funeral services for Lewis Dodd, 22, member of a Nelson County hill billy band, were held yesterday afternoon at Beach Grove. Dodd's body was found on route 151 in Nelson County early Sunday morning, apparently as if it had been left by a hit-run driver. Sheriff K. M. Baker of Nelson County and State Officer C. W. Blue continued their investigation. The death was the second auto fatality in Nelson County this year.

Races, Drills, Auction to Mark Va. Pony Roundup Tomorrow

Thousands Expected at Colorful Program of Chincoteague Islanders; Surfboat Pulling Contest Is One of Features.

By the Associated Press.

Chincoteague, Va., July 26 (AP). Chincoteague Islanders are preparing a rousing welcome to the thousands of visitors who will traverse the long causeway from the mainland Thursday to watch the annual pony penning, a colorful celebration nearly a century old.

The islanders are concentrating their efforts on making Chincoteague and the program attractive to the visitors, who come from many States to see the ponies, many driven from nearby Assateague Island, rounded up, ridden in races and auctioned to the tune of spirited bidding.

The ponies will be rounded up at Chincoteague and Assateague Wednesday afternoon and driven into town Thursday morning. The roundup Thursday will start at 8 a. m. and will be followed by a pony race at 10 a. m. and another at 11 a. m.

From 12 to 2 o'clock meals will be served by the ladies' auxiliary of the Chincoteague Fire Company, sponsors of the unique event.

At 2 p. m. there will be a beach apparatus drill on the dock in front of the postoffice, and at 2:30 a free-for-all sculling race.

Men of the Sixth and Seventh Coast Guard districts will perform in a 2-mile surfboat pulling race, beginning at 3 p. m. Two crews of the Sixth District at 3:30 will compete in a self-bailing surfboat capsize race, over a half-mile course, to be followed by a motor race for work scows, free for all, at 4 p. m.

Carnival attractions will continue from 7:30 to 11:30 p. m.

FarmhandHeld In Bludgeon Murder in Md.

Admits Wielding Pitchfork Handle to Protect Self From Knife.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., July 26.—The pitchfork handle slaying of James B. Sweeney, 36, of Thurmont, brought charges of manslaughter today against Donald V. Harne, 24.

State's Attorney Sherman P. Bowers said Harne confessed striking Sweeney last night on the farm of Earl Putman near Charlesville after the two farmhands had been drinking beer.

Harne told him, Prosecutor Bowers said, that Sweeney had been carrying a knife earlier in the evening and after a quarrel Sweeney rushed at him. Harne said he picked up the pitchfork handle to protect himself after seeing what he believed to be the knife in Sweeney's hands, according to Bowers.

An autopsy was performed late today by Dr. Edward P. Thomas who reported Sweeney's skull had been fractured at the base. Dr. Thomas said the farmhand died of internal hemorrhages after the blow.

A coroner will be appointed for an inquest, Bowers said. The court will be asked to fix bond at $1,500 for Harne, he added.

Md. Asylum Aides Called to Testify In Inmate's Death

Towson, Md., July 26 (AP).—Spring Grove Hospital officials, guards and attendants and several Baltimore County policemen were summoned tonight to testify at a hearing for two asylum attendants charged with causing a patient's death.

John W. Loeber, Catonsville magistrate, called the hearing, which he said might be a formality preliminary to holding Elmer Loveridge and Olive Corkran, the accused men, for a regular grand jury investigation.

Loveridge and Corkran were arrested on complaint of Dr. Silas Weltmer, Spring Grove superintendent, after Henry Baumgartner, an inmate of the institution, died from what physicians said was a beating.

George H. Benchoff.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 26.—Funeral services will be held Wednesday for George Harbaugh Benchoff, 59, invalid son of Mrs. Loudon F. Benchoff, east of Waynesboro, who died at the home of his brother, Col. Howard J. Benchoff, headmaster of Massanutten Academy, Woodstock, Va., Monday morning. Mr. Benchoff had taken a trip over the Skyline Drive Sunday and became suddenly ill with pneumonia late that evening. For 57 years he had been an invalid, moving about in a wheel chair. He was active and widely known in Washington township and despite his disability, attended many functions of public character.

Unions Seek WPA Wage Boost in Md.

C.I.O. and A.F.L. Heads Marshal Forces to Press Demand.

District Aide Promises Inquiry Latter Part of This Week.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., July 26.—Union leaders of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. marshaled their arguments tonight to bolster their contention that Works Progress Administration workers are underpaid.

An investigation, instigated by Representative Lewis, brought a reply today from Francis H. Dryden, WPA regional director, that he lacked power to raise prevailing wages here. He said in Philadelphia today that only the national WPA administration could change the status of Cumberland's relief workers from the intermediate wage to top classification.

The investigation will be conducted by F. W. Springer of Frederick, area representative of the WPA who said he will be in Cumberland "the latter part of the week, certainly not before Thursday."

"I cannot comment on the situation until we have had time to study it," he said. "We feel confident that an equitable solution can be reached."

The western Maryland industrial unions council, the C. I. O. central body here, complained that the wage rate is too low for "decent living standards." They also demanded the removal of Dryden because of his alleged failure to respond to grievances and that certification of jobs is delayed because it is made in Frederick.

Va. High Waters Wash Out Bridge

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—The State Highway Department said today a 20-foot bridge on route 360 north of Keysville, in Prince Edward County, was washed out today, and that high water was blocking route 40, west of Keysville.

Reported blocked by high water at the Nottoway River were routes 49 and 137. Department officials said they expected trouble tomorrow from the Nottoway on routes 1, 301 and 40.

Route 1 in Dinwiddie County was blocked in a lowlying section. Highway officials said the Richmond section, with a rainfall of more than 3 inches since yesterday, was the "wettest" spot in the State.

Gov. Price 'Streamlines' Name of New Agency

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—The newest State agency came in today for "streamlining" at the hands of Gov. Price.

Col. W. M. Kemper, the governor's executive assistant, said the committee on co-operation of State and local research agencies would henceforth be known as the Virginia Council on Public Administration.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, July 26.—Pardon me if I seem to be a bit incoherent this morning, but there are strange and bewildering goings-on in the two big leagues this season. The dizzy developments of the past two weeks, which have seen the Natoinal League win an All-Star game and Zeke Bonura make a base hit, reached a smashing climax today in Detroit.

POVICH.

I am referring to the totally daffy scenes at the Fort street railroad station, where the Detroit Tigers arrived this morning from the East and were hailed like conquering heroes by a mob estimated at 4,000.

They were no conquering heroes. They were returning from the absolutely worst Eastern trip ever experienced by a Detroit team in the last decade. They had won only 3 out of 11 games and at one point had lost 7 straight in the East. Yet as they detrained this morning they were greeted by throngs of wildly cheering fans.

Parades were formed, escorts were provided for the players, and the bands played. For blocks around the station, traffic was at a standstill. A team that ordinarily would be happy to sneak back into town unnoticed after such a performance on the road was welcomed like league leaders. It was all very confusing, not to say exceedingly zany.

Suppose the Tigers had won four games on the road instead of three.

The chances are that this season will go down in the books as the strangest of them all. Day by day, the screwiest things are developing. Here in Detroit there is now talk of Mickey Cochrane going behind the bat again as the Tigers' catcher, despite the fact that even a light tap on his silver-inlaid skull might mean his death.

This spring, despite the advice of doctors, Cochrane wanted to play ball. He had no great faith in the catching ability of big Rudy York, and he didn't admire George Tebbett's hitting. He saw the Tigers as having a chance to win the pennant if he were the catcher.

But Walter O. Briggs, Detroit owner, would not hear of that. Even when Cochrane went South in midwinter and got himself into playing condition, Briggs refused. He didn't want Cochrane out there risking his life. Mickey resigned himself to a sedentary role as bench manager of the Tigers.

Mr. Cochrane Declines.

And then, the other day, out of a clear sky, Owner Briggs advised Cochrane that he could catch if he liked. Mickey took one look at the league standings, saw his Tigers 13 games but of it, realized that with his kind of pitching the Tigers didn't have a chance anyway, and refrained from telling Owner Briggs to go jump in Lake Erie, saying simply, No, think you.

There isn't much rhyme or reason, either, to the goings-on in the American League pennant race, if you care to analyze them. For example, the St. Louis Browns have a 6-4 edge over the Tigers in their games this season, and Detroit has an 8-7 edge over the Red Sox. Yet the Red Sox have licked the Brown in 11 out of 13 games.

And, bringing the parallel closer to home, we find that Philadelphia has won 4 out of 9 games from the Yankees and that the Yankees have won 7 out of 9 from the Nats. Yet the Nats have licked the Athletics in 10 out of 13 games. Figure that out and then report for your straight jacket!

Oscar Vitt checked in the other day with the statement that he was "disappointed" in Bob Feller. Why? Chiefly because Feller has won only 10 games this season and lost only 5. There isn't a manager in either league who would not be glad to swallow similar "disappointments."

Where's Gomez?

There isn't much that is sane, either, about a season which finds both Hank Greenberg and Lou Gehrig still struggling to climb above the .300 mark in hitting. And Lefty Gomez, who has been pitching better ball this season than for many years past, owns one of his worst won-and-lost records.

Over in the other league, the National, it's all just as confusing. Ival Goodman, one of last year's dime-a-dozen outfielders who hit only .273, is the 1938 home-run king of the league. And Dolf Camilli, the slugger for whom Larry McPhail spent $50,000 of Brooklyn's money because Camilli has always been known as a hitter, is hitting exactly .255.

Young Johnny Vander Meer at this time last year was pitching for Syracuse and not pitching very impressively. But he is known now as the first man ever to pitch two no-hit games in succession in the big leagues. Dizzy Dean, who was literally forced to pitch when Phil Wrigley lost patience with Dean's sore arm, finally obeyed orders and in his two games since has allowed only one run.

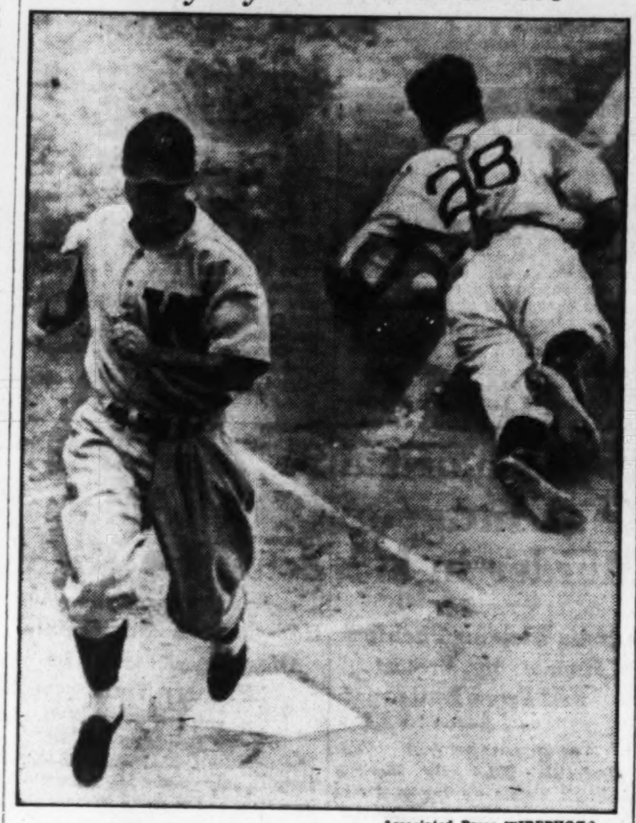
Buddy Myer Scores on Errors



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Second Baseman Myer scored Washington's first run in yesterday's game at Detroit when Kennedy missed Catcher Tebbets' throw to pitcher's box. Rogell recovered the ball and drew Tebbets off the plate with a wide throw. Myer had moved from first when the Detroit catcher threw wide trying to catch him off base.

Tigers Shell Wes Ferrell Off Mound

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, July 26.—History was repeated by the Nats and Hank Greenberg this afternoon.

History first cropped out in the proceedings between the Nats and the Tigers when Wes Ferrell was pounded out of the box, a repetition of his recent failures. And the Nats repeated themselves as a team by losing three leads and the ball game.

But the big repeat act of the afternoon was delivered by big Hank Greenberg. He hit a home run in the fourth inning and then, in the eighth, with the game tied at 5-5, he did it again. That second homer of the day by Greenberg, a terrific blast into the upper deck of leftfield, won the ball game, 6 to 5.

Kelley Removed.

Bucky Harris had entrusted the 5-5 tie to Left-handed Elon Hogsett after the pitching of Ferrell and Harry Kelley had left very much to be desired. And Greenberg didn't dally with Hogsett. First man at bat in the eighth, he ignored the first pitch, but not the second. He sent the ball soaring over Al Simmons' head and the Nats' leftfielder took one fleeting glimpse at the hit and remained stationary in his tracks as the bleacher denizens scrambled for the ball.

The Tigers had a mighty Hebrew combination today in Greenberg, the boy from the Bronx, and Harry Eisenstat, a left-handed lad from Brooklyn. While Greenberg was winning the ball game, Eisenstat was holding the Nats helpless. Relieving Vernon Kennedy with one out in the sixth inning, Eisenstat limited the Nats to two futile hits from that point.

Bucky Harris' pitchers, particularly Ferrell, were a wastrel crew. Ferrell had three different leads—1-0, 3-2 and 5-3—but he couldn't hold any of them. All told, the Tigers collected 13 hits while the Nats were accumulating 11.

Until Greenberg put the crusher on the Nats in the eighth, the Washington athletes were being kept in the ball game chiefly by the efforts of Buddy Lewis and Rick Ferrell, who were banging runs across the plate with great regularity against Vernon Kennedy.

Very much to their surprise, the Nats found themselves in a 1-0 lead after taking their bats in the second inning. They didn't make a hit, but they scored a run, like this:

Buddy Myer drew a walk from Kennedy and then when Catcher Tebbets tried to trap him off first base with an errant snap throw, the ball scooted into right field and Myer scooted to third on the catcher's error. Then followed the rare piece of business of Kennedy muffing a return of one of his pitches by Tebbets, and Myer scored while the ball was rolling to second base.

Tigers Start in 2d.

All of a sudden, with two out in the second, the Tigers busied themselves against Ferrell. Morgan singled to center, Tebbets tripled against the right center fence, Christman beat out a hit that Ferrell deflected out of Travis' reach, and the Tigers had two runs.

Three straight singles by Travis, Wasdell and Rick Ferrel plus a sacrifice by Wes Ferrell and Buddy Lewis' two base blast against the distant right center fence netted the Nats three runs and a 4-2 lead in the fourth inning. But along came Greenberg with the first of his day's homers and that lead was cut to 4-3 in the same inning.

The Nats enlarged their advantage to 5-3 in the sixth but, paradoxically, they muffed their big chance. Rick Ferrell's single and Brother Wes' walk put the first two batters on base and after Case sacrificed, Buddy Lewis scored Rick with a single to right. That blow knocked Kennedy out of the box and in came Eisenstat to walk West. With the bases full, Pinch Hitter Al Simmons eased the tension for the Tigers by lofting to White in short left.

Ferrell pitched two runs right back at the Tigers in the latter half of the inning, with Fox's single scoring a pair of hit-making colleagues. When Tebbetts also singled for the fourth Tiger hit of the inning, Harris waved Ferrell out. Wesley heaved the ball to the ground in

New York, July 26 (AP).—The second-place Giants left 14 men on base today, blew numerous scoring chances in the closing innings, and thus dropped a 6-5 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals, to remain four games behind the Pittsburgh Pirates, who also were beaten.

Lanky Cliff Melton, for the third straight time, failed to finish what he started. The big southpaw gave up all of the Cards' runs, including homers by Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize in the fifth, to be charged with his ninth defeat. Lefty Clyde Shoun, who also failed to go the route, nevertheless got credit for the victory, his second over the Terrymen and Melton inside of a week.

The Giants lost their big chance in the ninth. Johnny McCarthy led off by drawing a base on balls, but Lou Chiozza, who had replaced Alex Kampouris at second, bunted into a double play. Gus Mancuso then singled and pinch-hitter Sam Leslie walked. With two out and two on, Curt Davis was called in to pitch to Bob Seeds, and Seeds flied out on the first pitch.

Bucs Get Off to Early Lead but Fail to Keep Up Pace.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 26.—The Phillies gave the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-to-5 setback today by a ninth inning rally which netted two runs.

The Phils' triumph came as a result of an error by Arky Vaughan on Atwood's roller, Mueller's sacrifice which Brown tossed too late to third, Clark's pinch hit, another safety by Jordan and a pass to Brack, forcing Hugh Mulcahy over the plate. Mulcahy was running for Clark.

The Pirates jumped off to a five-run lead in the first three innings. Suhr's double and Rizzo's single scored one run in the second. Pittsburgh scored four times in the third. Handley walked as a starter, and went to second on Lloyd Waner's single. Paul Waner doubled to right, scoring both men. On Rizzo's ninth homer of the season, two more counted.

New Yorker Rallies After Slow Start

1,600 See Gotham Lad's Comeback After Losing Opening 2 Rounds.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Al Reid, of New York, won a unanimous decision over Paul (Tennessee) Lee last night in the eight-round feature event at Turner's Arena. The fight was the third in the current featherweight elimination tournament.

crowd of 1,600 saw the match, postponed from Monday night because of rain. The fight was one of those bar-room brawl affairs from the first punch to the last, but after the third round Reid was in complete command of thes ituation.

A lighting system, rigged up to indicate the score of the fight for the fans' enlightenment, was given a trial. After the first round the green light, indicating the fighter ahead, was lit over Lee's corner. After the second it was again over Lee's corner, but after the third to the remainder of the fight it was on over Reids corner.

The third and sixth rounds furnished most of the action in a fight that was full of little else. Lee came out of his corner and landed three left hooks to Reid's head, staggering his opponent. Lee shot another left to the head and a right to the body, but Reid jumped in with both fists to the body and they fought in mid-ring for a few seconds.

Reid chased Lee to a neutral corner where they mixed it up in great fashion until the end of the round.

Lee got off first again in the fifth with two good lefts to the head. Reid rallied and drove Lee into the ropes. Lee came out of a crouch with a resounding right on Reid's jaw. The punch shook Reid up considerably bue he shook off the effects of the blow and came back with a torrid body attack which forced Lee to give ground. The remainder of the round saw the action churn at close quarters.

The sixth round was Lee's best. Reid landed a right on his foe's jaw at the outset and they went into a clinch. Le ame out with a right to Reid's jaw and the New Yorker then walked into a right under the heart that staggered him. But Lee faile dto follow up his advantage and Reid shook it off and came back after Lee.

The latter was waiting and shot two lefts to Reid's body and a right to his head and had Reid hanging on. Reid was looking to his corner for instructions. They fought at close quarters and Reid came back strong at the finish of the round.

The battle was then all Reid in the seventh and eighth. Le was staggered with a right to the jaw at the opening of the seventh and had much the worst of it for the last two rounds. His only effective punch in the final stanza was a right to the jaw.

Al Mancini, 124¾, knocked out Augie Kroll, 125½, after 2:07 minutes of the fourth round of the scheduled eight-round semifinal. The fight was an excellent one throughout with Kroll winning the first two rounds. Mancini backed him into a corner in the fourth, and rocked him with a right to the heart. The effects of that blow apparently shattered Kroll's system, for he was no match for Mancini after that and was easily put away.

Armanda Sicilia, 127¼, won a decision over Benny Piazza, 127½, in six rounds. This also was a good fight with plenty of action.

Angelo Puglisis, 161¾, scored a technical knockout over Rusty Baker, 159¾, after 1:48 of the first round of a scheduled six-rounder. Baker was down for a nine-cound before Referee Eddie LaFond stopped the battle.

Galento Is Given Third Transfusion.

A hospital bulletin issued at 5 p. m. said:

"Mr. Galento's general condition is unchanged. His temperature range was the same as yesterday (102-103). He was given a transfusion at 2 p. m. to build up his resistance and prevent possible complications. The donor was Motorcycle Fred Millman of the Orange police force. The patient is more cheerful today."

Tony's mother, Mrs. Nancy Galento, fainted in the hallway, just outside her son's doorway during today's transfusion. She was given medical attention and sent home.

Game Postponed.

The baseball game, originally scheduled for tonight at Ballston Stadium between the Jewish and the Italian All-Stars, has been postponed, due to the fact that neither team has been able to practice. The game will be played within three weeks.

You Think Rain Has Hurt the Fights Here? Listen to Fight Manager Dundee's Tale of Woe

By Lewis F. Atchison.

And Mr. Dundee, who handles a stable of fighters and had one of them—Angelo Puglisi, on last night's show, moaned like a guy whose best girl has just eloped with his bitterest rival, and speared another hunk of salami.

"Dyckman's Oval," he continued, "has had all but two of eight shows postponed, and they've been having a terrible time getting their dates adjusted. Why, only a week ago Monday night Al Reid (who fought here last night) won a decision over Nat Litfin fighting in the rain—and they would've postponed that bout if Reid wasn't booked in here this week.

"Canarsie Arena at Golden City has had five of its eight shows juggled around. Nicky Camarata—and he's one of my best fighters right now—won from Lew Feldman there the night before the Louis-Schmeling fight, and it started raining during the semifinal that night. I'm telling you this is the rainiest season I've ever seen."

And Dundee, one of the best salami hunters in the East, tracked down another slice of the delicacy with that sweeping left jab.

"I know Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn are crying the blues," he continued, "and they have a right to, but how about Johnny Attell at Dexter Park in New York? You know how many shows he's had on schedule? One in seven."

"Everybody's had bad luck this summer," he said, his keen scent detecting the presence of more salami, "but let me tell you about the hard luck I had in Norfolk in 1934. You know, I used to promote shows in Norfolk, Richmond, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach.

"I had a natural booked at the ball park—Ken Overlin—and he's a real fighter, vs. Frankie Remus. Both sailors and from rival battlewagons—the Tennessee and Idaho. The whole fleet and a good portion of the land-lubbing public was heated up over the fight, which was for the benefit of some charity—I forget just what it was now.

"Well, we had a $6,000 advance sale and it looked like we were going to set a record. The fight was scheduled Friday night and all day Friday it rained. It was something like a cloudburst, so we postponed the show until Saturday. We had to get it over Saturday because Monday the fleet sailed for maneuvers and I didn't know when it would be back.

"Tom Haines, who was with the paper which sponsors the show and Ellis Loveless, business manager of the affair, and I stayed up all Friday night. At four o'clock Saturday morning we peeked out and it was raining harder than ever. At eight o'clock it was getting worse, and we were getting desperate. Finally we agreed that the only thing to do was move the fight indoors, and that meant we not only couldn't sell more tickets, but we might not be able to honor all those we had sold.

"Well, to make a long story short, we moved indoors—and that afternoon the sun came out as pretty as you ever saw it, and it was hot, too. So the three of us decided to change our plans again and stage it at the ball park. We hopped in a cab and went out there, and you should have seen it. It was 3 feet under water."

Dundee looked into the adjoining booth for any stray pieces of salami before resuming his narrative.

"Overlin knocked out Remus in the seventh round that night, winning the Navy professional middleweight championship. And you know I'd like to bring him in here against that George Abrams. He'll teach the kid a few tricks and I give you my word I won't let him hurt him.

"I'd like to make that Quarles—Gevinson match, too, as soon as possible. There's another boy the fans will like. He'll take that Gevinson apart so even a watchmaker can't assemble him. You know Eddie Dunn, don't you? Well he's going to a dentist in New York who is fixing his teeth. Eddie has a bad nerve, or something, in his jaw, and everytime he gets hit he does funny things. He isn't normal. But after getting through at the doctor's I expect him to be all right.

We inquired after Mr. Dundee's new heavyweight, a youngster out of Richmond, whom Maynard Daniels kayoed at Virginia Beach three weeks ago.

"Oh, him," he resonded with a far-away look in his eyes, "Well, he's gone back to the farm. I'm bringing him back in September. There's nothing wrong with his jaw—it's his head, and a doctor can't fix that. But after what Daniels did to him maybe he'll show improvement the next time you see him."

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Strange as It Seems.

New York, July 26.—So many unexpected things happen in this sphere of sports that sometimes it seems we are immune to the element of surprise and only by going back a little way and checking up is it possible to realize what has taken place. After records have been achieved, feats have been accomplished, supposedly impossible marks attained we have a way of sitting back and, with the second guess, feeling that we knew they would happen all the time and wondering if there isn't anything new under the sun. That is, when there is any sun.

VIDMER.

But flip back the calendar to the start of the year, seven short months ago, and then try to focus into the future, looking at the things that have transpired from the viewpoint of January.

Who would have dared to prophesy that Babe Ruth would be back in baseball? In January the cry that Babe belonged in a big league uniform and that the game owed him a place had dwindled to something less than a mere murmer. Yet there he is every day at Ebbets Field, his big and bulky, familiar figure patrolling the coache's box at first base.

* * * *

Who would have thought that when July came Ralph Guldahl still would be the National Open champion? He won last summer at Oakland Hills in Detroit, but they seldom repeat in the Open and it was a long shot if anyone selected Guldahl to come through again when the golfers gathered at Cherry Hills in Colorado.

* * * *

Go West, Young Man.

Who would have guessed that Fritz Crisler would sever his connections as football coach at Princeton? When he came out of the West to lead the Tiger out of the wilderness a few years ago, putting together two undefeated teams, Fritz was taken to the hearts of all Princeton men and seemed to be a permanent fixture at old Nassau. Yet everything has changed in the course of a few weeks and Crisler won't be at Princeton this fall, but will return to the Big Ten, where he started, taking charge of Michigan's football fortunes.

Who would have dreamed that anybody would pitch two no-hit games in succession? And if they had been forced to guess who might turn the feat who would have selected a young left hander, serving his first season in the major leagues? It might have been a Hubbell, a Dean, a Grove or even a Feller, but it wasn't. It was young Johnny Vander Meer who put together two perfect pitching performances. Who was Vander Meer in January?

* * * *

Who would have predicted that there would be lights in Ebbets Field and that the Dodgers would be playing night games? And what were the odds against Burleigh Grimes still being manager as the pennant races rode into August?

* * * *

I don't think there were any prominent predictions that Helen Wills Moody would be back in tournament competition after a year's retirement, the second or third of her career, and certainly no prognostications to the effect that she would rule the courts of Wimbledon in June.

* * * *

From Over the Seas.

For that matter, who gave a thought to Jugoslavia as the possible, even the probably challenger for the Davis Cup? The United States defenders of the trophy, figured they might have to meet Germany in the challenger round or perhaps Australia, but Jugoslavia has played its way to the European zone final and stands as least an even chance of beating both Germany and Australia and meeting the Americans.

* * * *

There has been speculation for several years concerning the possibility of anyone beating four minutes for the mile, but no one could foresee that Glenn Cunningham would step out during the winter and come within 4.4 seconds of that figure. Yet he did.

* * * *

There weren't any brave men who wanted to predict at that the nearest competitors to Joe Louis' throne would be Max Baer and Tony Galento, but then, after all, they aren't so near at that. And who was there to say that Barney Ross would have been dethroned by a featherweight and gone into retirement by the time midsummer came around?

Anchors Aweigh.

One of the sure shots of the summer from the viewpoint of spring; was that one of the Coast crews, California or Washington, would row away with the Poughkeepsie Aegatta on the Hudson. But it was the Navy that showed the way across the finish line.

* * * *

And who would have guessed, back there in January, that Dizzy Dean would be pitching for the Cubs instead of the Cardinals, where he loomed up like a landmark?

* * * *

Who would have thought that the Cincinnati Reds, who finished a complete last in 1937, would move into August with four of the five leading hitters in the National League and trailing the pace setters for the pennant by only a handful of games? Or that the Yankees, conquerors of every club that crossed their path a year ago, would be struggling desperately to shake off the Indians and holding a margin of only a single game at this point in the current campaign?

* * * *

Putt for Half By Spencer Fails to Fall

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Thus Andy climaxed a brilliant year's golf in this section with a two under par performance over the Congressional course, a 142 total, that won the top prize money of $120, plus the low round prize of $15, a result of his afternoon 70.

Defending Champion Cliff Spencer made a gallant bid to defend his title, but the tying putt rimmed the cup on the thirty-sixth green and he was forced into the runner-up role with a 143 count, a stroke ahead of the host mentor Wiffy Cox and the four-time champion, Al Houghton Old Point Comfort, Va., who matched par figures of 144. Spencer received $90, Cox and Houghton $45.

Greiner Leads Amateurs

The amateurs were led by the youth who has dominated their tournaments thus far, modest Otto Greiner, of Rodgers Forge, the Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion, who matched par in the afternoon with a 72 and tacked it to a morning 76 for a 148 total. Bobby Brownell, Manor, was second with 73—77—100. Brownell's first round included an eagle deuce on the fourth hole, where he holed a four iron shot, and only 26 putts for the 18 holes.

It was a day for the favored players as the first four finishers were picked to battle it out for the title and Greiner was figured to pace the simon-pures. Out of the money by two shots was Ralph Beach, Suburban, with 74, 73—147, including the lowest round of the day on the back nine, a 33. Johnny Bass, Clifton Park, was next with 72, 76—148, while three fine golfers were deadlocked with 150, Gene Larkin, Woodmont, 78-72; Walter Greiner, Woodholme, 76-74, and Rut Coffey, last year's runner-up from Winchester, with twin 75s.

The amateurs battle for six prizes, with Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam, with 79-72, including two bad holes, tying Spencer Overton, the methodical Baltimorean, who had duplicate rounds. E. G. Barnes, Rolling Road, and Jack Fulton, Baltimore C. C., were fifth and sixth with respective totals of 155 and 156.

Gibson Chief Threat.

Gibson, favorite of the visiting players from the Oriole City, due to his winning performances in previous tourneys, was a threat all the way and, like a true champion, saved his punch for the stretch, where he rapped in a 1 under par 34 for the crown. He played the first none in under par 36 on each trip, and was over only on the second nine of the first 18, where he required 36 shots.

Spencer, accounting for six birdies, five 1 over par bogeys and 25 pars over the route, also played the final nine in 34, but his bid for birdies on the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth holes were denied. He last went over regulation figures on the ninth, where he was trapped from the tee and failed to get out. He birdied 15, after five pars. Knowing he needed a birdie to tie on the final hole Spencer boomed a 280-yard tee shot, chipped 6 feet short and watched his putt slip by the right side of the cup, and with it his chances of retaining his crown via the play-off route.

Houghton, champion from 1933 through 1936, and a third-place finisher last year, was regarded as a repeating champion as he tacked a second round 73 to a morning 71 for a 244 total. He was a member of the first threesome. But the gallery failed to reckon with the sub-par tactics of Gibson and Spencer. The Old Point Comfort mentor had nine birdies over the route, but was betrayed by an unfaithful putter that yielded seven 3-putt greens.

Cox Is Consistent.

Cox, a favorite, played the most consistent golf of the day, par on each nine, 37 twice on the first and two 35s on the back, but it did not match the figure he predicted would be needed to win, Gibson's total of 142.

Gibson is a reformed lefthander, and claims he is able to play well left-handed. He has been out of the money only once this year in one-day tourneys, and has averaged better than 72 for nearly 20 rounds.

Fred McLeod, Columbia's veteran mentor, played the first round in 14 4s and 4 5s for a 75, including a par 37 on the out nine, but slipped to 82 in the afternoon.

Leo Walper had a costly experience on his morning round, as he hit a chip chot on the eighth hole, and on the upswing hit the ball again, finishing with a 7 on the hole.

Record Vote Names Stars

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—The eleven young men who will line up on floodlighted Soldier Field the night of August 31 to battle the Washington Redskins, champions of the National Professional Football League, were named tonight after a natoinal poll produced a reord vote of 8,526,328.

Elected to the starting positions in the fifth annual charity game were two players from the South, two from the Pacific Coast, one from the East and six from the Middle West. This will be the line-up at the kick-off:

Quarterback—Andy Puplis, Notre Dame.

The colege coaching staff, now being chosen in another national poll, is required by the rules governing the game to start the "elected" players, provided they accept invitations to join the squad and survive the rigors of training. If a player picked by the fans is unable to start, the next man in line in the poll will be given the assignment.

After the kick-off, the coaches may make substitutions as early and often as their judgment dictates. They may use as many or as few players as they wish.

A total of 68 players will receive invitations to join the squad, which will assemble at Northwestern University August 12 for 19 days of training, longest practice period for any of the All-Star squads.

Kathryn Hemphill Annexes Medal in Women's Tourney

Asheville, N. C., July 26.—Kathryn Hemphill, long driving, steady putting brunette from Columbia, S. C., scored a consistent 40-40—80 today and won the qualifying medal in the Biltmore Forest Women's Invitation golf tournament.

Her performance was four strokes better than the runner-up, Sally Guth, of St. Louis, who had 39, 45—84.

Tied for third place where Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., 42, 43—85, and Alliene Hoover, Thomasville, N. C., 43, 42—85.

Mrs. John Degner 3d, of Charlotte, N. C., had 41, 46—87, and Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., who won the title the last two years, was next with 45, 43—88.

Others qualifying for the championship flight of 16 from the starting field of 57 were: Deane Van Landingham, Charlotte, 46, 42—88; Mrs. Alberta Neblett, Atlanta, 46, 43—89; Joy McCann, Montgomery, Ala., 44, 45—89; Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, 44, 46—90; Marion Gayer, Charleston, S. C., 45, 47—92; Mrs. R. E. Wilson, St. Petersburg, Fla., 48, 47—95; Mrs. J. C. Wright, Atlanta, 51, 46—97; Eliza Coxe, Asheville, 51, 46—97; Mrs. Ellis C. Baum, New York, 51, 47—98; Helen Smith, Greensboro, N. C., 47, 53—100.

high disgust and went to the showers amid the boos of the 6,800 customers and 5,200 Boy Scouts.

Zeke Bonura raised a flurry of hope for the Nats when he doubled against the rightfield screen with one out in the seventh, but he was trapped trying to take third on Rick Ferrell's grounder, and the only other hit Eisenstat permitted was Travis' single with two out in the ninth.

The Tigers made motions toward winning the game in the seventh when, with one out, a pair of singles by White and Rogell put runners on first and third. But Hogsett, who was sent into the box in this crisis, got the side out when Buddy Myer started a spectacular double play on Gehringer's grounder.

There wasn't much that Hogsett's supporting cast could do about that ball Greenberg hit in the eighth, however, except to voice their goodbyes to the ball game.

Top-Seeded Tennis Aces Move Ahead

Bitsy Grant Is Winner Over Net Veteran; Allison Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 26.—Top-seeded Robert Riggs, seeking his second leg on the Sea Bright bowl, and Frankie Parker, his principal rival for a place on the 1938 Davis Cup squad, paced a well-balanced men's field into the round of 16 today at the annual Sea Bright Invitation Tennis tournament.

Parker, seeded behind Riggs in the draw, outsmarted Carleton Rood, University of North Carolina player from Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—0, but Riggs was extended to an extra set before taking the measure of his fellow Chicagoan, John Shostrom, in a center-court match.

The first break in the seedings was recorded in the second round of the women's play when Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., seeded fourth, was upset by Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, 7—5, 6—2.

Other seeded singles performers prevailed although fifth-seeded Hal Surface, of Kansas City, was carried to 6—2, 1—6, 6—4, by Douglas Imhoff, one of the strongest of the touring California delegation.

Grant Beats Veteran.

Second seeded Dorothy Bundy was pressed to win by 7—5, 6—3, over Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, third in the draw, moved into the quarter-final round, routing Theodosia Smith, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—2.

Frank Kovacs Wins.

Frank Kovacs, 6-foot 3-inch youngster who lost the Longwood finals to Riggs, made an impressive start with a 6—4, 6—2 victory over John McDiarmid, of Princeton, N. J., champion here in 1936.

The nearest thing to an upset in the men's division came when Charles Hare, former British Davis Cup player, was eliminated by Robert Harman, of Oakland, Calif., 8—6, 2—6, 6—4.

Allison Is Victor.

William Allison, of Austin, Tex., former national champion, averted an upset by applying pressure in the late stages of his match with Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, Fla. Mulloy, with a smashing game, forced Allison to the limit to win, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Riggs and Grant gained the fourth round of doubles play, conquering Ronald Lubin and Lewis Wetherell, young Los Angeles pair, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3. Allison and Robert Kamrath, of Austin, were eliminated by the steady Floridians, Mulloy and George Toley, 6—4, 2—6, 6—0. Other doubles matches saw Parker and Hare beat Kovacs and Harman, 6—2, 6—2, and Joe Hunt, Los Angeles, and Sidney B. Wood, jr., New York, eliminate Frank Guernsey, Orlando, Fla., and Russell Bobbitt, Atlanta, 15—13, 6—2.

Current plans call for only the men's singles and women's doubles finals to be played Saturday, with other final matches Sunday, the first time in 51 years of the tourney that Sunday matches have been considered.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIDNEY CARTON, $4.68, $3.60, $2.70; NOTAS SOCIALES, $9.94, $5.14; GREEDAN, $2.66.

SIDNEY CARTON took command immediately, opened up a good lead in the first three-sixteenths and rated along in front, was never threatened, winning with speed to spare. NOTAS SOCIALES, hard hustled from the outset, went prominently all the way, but was doing her utmost at the end to hold safe the closing challenge of GREEDAN. The latter, far back early, was unable to materially better his position until the closing quarter mile, moved up with a rush and would probably been second in another stride.

SECOND RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:04½. Winner, Jerry McCarthy Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAIN TRUST, $6.08, $4.66, $3.04; BRIGHT GEM, $15.60, $7.26; HATS OFF, $3.86.

BRAIN TRUST took command at once, opened up a good lead in the first quarter mile and dominated the running throughout and was in hand at the end. BRIGHT GEM moved up steadily after straightening out on the backstretch, continued gamely to the close, but was no match for the winner. HATS OFF, taken under reserve after gaining a forward position, held on with good energy to the close, although unable to close any ground in the final drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY WEAVER, $4.44, $3.06, $2.62; GOLD HAT, $9.28, $5.38; SPINDLETOP, $3.06.

LADY WEAVER, slow to settle into her stride and far back until rounding from the backstretch, began to work her way forwardly and, closing stoutly through the stretch, caught the leaders tiring to win going away. GOLD HAT, reserved for the first half mile, responded gamely to pressure and finished with good energy through the stretch run. SPINDLETOP went to the front while under slight restraint when the early pace-maker began tiring, opened up a good lead, only to weaken badly through the last furlong.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:06. Winner, Mrs. D. A. Buckley's b. g. (6), by New Guinea—dam, unnamed, by Sprig of Mint. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14, 1:40 3-5, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEAD HUNTER, $6.84, $3.96, $3.70; FIRING, $3.66, $3.16; LAMB'S WOOL, $5.96.

HEAD HUNTER, much the best, took command in the opening stride, drew clear straightening out on the backstretch and increased his lead steadily and was being eased up at the end. FIRING, under punishment midway down the backstretch, began bettering her position steadily and closed with good energy, although never in a position to endanger the winner. LAMB'S WOOL, reserved for the first six furlongs, saved ground into the stretch only to weaken slightly through the last sixteenth.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. The Jackson Purse. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:35½. Winner, H. Parr's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KING PHARAMOND, $7.56, $3.62, $2.96; MAMA'S BOY, $2.94, $2.52; FOGGY MORN, $4.52.

KING PHARAMOND followed along in closest pursuit of the pace established by FOGGY MORN for the first half mile, went to the front after passing the furlong pole to draw out steadily. MAMA'S BOY was restrained until leaving the backstretch, worked his way up steadily and closed with good energy in the stretch run. FOGGY MORN displayed good speed from the start and only weakened during the last furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:08½. Winner, G. Ponce's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONI, $6.90, $3.82, $3.24; TELL WHY, $5.52, $4.48; SWEEPING FLAME, $6.44.

TONI followed along in closest pursuit of the pace established by SWEEPING FLAME, wore the latter down when called upon after reaching the stretch and grew out steadily. TELL WHY, restrained for the first six furlongs, came gamely through the stretch run and was up in the closing stride to wear down SWEEPING FLAME. The latter outran his field to the first turn, opened up a good early lead and rated along in front, faltered through the last five-sixteenths.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:35. Off 5:38. Winner, Mrs. M. J. O'Brien's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY TORCH, $5.62, $3.48, $3.10; FLYING RAPTURE, $4.68, $3.68; BLOX, $5.30.

LIBERTY TORCH was slow to settle into her best stride, moved up on the inside leaving the backstretch, was forced to take up when in close quarters nearing the stretch, recovered gamely and taking command, drew out steadily in the last three-sixteenths. FLYING RAPTURE went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew clear when straightened out on the backstretch and, despite holding on stubbornly, was unable to cope with the closing challenge of the winner. BLOX, unruly at the post, was bumped soon after the start and dropped back, but began closing with good energy in the last quarter mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 6:11. Off 6:12½. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAUNTON, $30.06, $15.50, $9.08; MAD FRUMP, $9.18, $5.80; ANHELATION, $9.50.

TAUNTON outran his field from the start, opened up a long lead in the run through the backstretch and was never seriously threatened, although ridden out sharply at the end. MAD FRUMP worked his way up gradually in the last half mile and came with good energy through the stretch run. ANHELATION, in close pursuit of the pace early, was unable to close any ground when placed under urging.

Philadelphia Junior Davis Cuppers Win

Defeat Capital's Netters by 9 to 6 Score at Army and Navy.

Paced by Isadore Bellis, sixth ranking national junior netman, the Philadelphia junior Davis Cup team defeated the Washington junior Davis Cuppers, 9—6, yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club.

At the expiration of 12 junior matches, the score was tied, 6—6, but the 3—0 margin of the Quaker representatives in the boys' division gave them their margin of victory.

It was Bellis who gave Philadelphia its first victory of the afternoon when he defeated Allie Ritzenberg, Washington's No. 1 player, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4. Bellis used the chop stroke as his weapon in winning the match, also employing the cross-court strike to advantage.

Bellis, University of Pennsylvania junior, is undefeated in Philadelphia competition. Included among his victims are Archie Henderson, North Carolina U. ace, who defeated Gil Hunt here; Don Cameron, Canadian Davis Cup star, who extended Barney Welsh recently at Baltimore, and George Dunn, who is a high ranking player in the Philadelphia area.

Among the tournaments which he has won are the Penn State tourney for the past five years, the Philadelphia Junior championship for the past five years, the Middle States tournament for the past seven years, and the Atlantic Coast junior title for the past two years. He is 18 years of age and studying commerce and finance in the University of Pennsylvania.

A match yesterday of equal interest to the unusually large gallery was that of Vic Seixas, of Philadelphia, and Billy Bensinger. It attracted great interest due to the fact that it was the feature boys' match of the day between two sensational youngsters under 15 years of age.

Seixas, ranked fourth in the National boy ratings, was a pregame favorite, and finally defeated Bensinger, who is Washington's boy champion, 6—1, 6—4. Both boys will go to Culver, Ind., next week to compete in the national boy tournament.

The doubles match between Allie Ritzenberg and Bill Turner vs. Izzy Bellis and Malcolm Weinstein was probably the best-played of the five doubles matches. Ritzenberg and Turner, flaunting beautiful cross-court shots, won five consecutive games in the first set, to the utter amazement of the gallery.

Proving that they have one of the best doubles teams in the East, Weinstein and Bellis, then opened fire with a repertoire of sensational shots and captured five consecutive games to tie the score. The grueling match taxed the strength of the visitors and Ritzengerg and Turner easily won the next two games to win the set, 7—5.

Singles.

Isadore Bellis (P) defeated Allie Ritzenberg, 6—2, 6—4. Bill Vogt (P) defeated Chandler Brossard, 6—2, 6—3. Malcolm Weinstein (P) defeated Ralph Adair, 6—3, 6—2. Morton Kline (P) defeated John Owens, 6—0, 6—1. Chuck Harnden (P) defeated Harry March, 6—0, 6—1. Charley Lord (P) defeated Jack Hoyt, 6—4, 6—3. Miguel Nunez (W) defeated Dick Shipp, 8—4, 7—5. Vic Seixas (P) defeated Billy Bensinger, 6—1, 6—4. Charley Channing (W) defeated Jack Wendell, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3. Billy Turner defeated John Boyer, 6—3, 1—6, 8—6.

Doubles.

Channing and March defeated Wendell and Boyer, 6—2, 7—5. Ritzenberg and Turner defeated Bellis and Weinstein, 7—5, 9—7. Harnden and Kline defeated Adair and Owen, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Dalby and Sokol defeated Lord and Shipp, 6—0, 6—8, 6—3. Seixas and Vogt defeated Brossard and Cowan, 6—3, 6—3.

Bel Air Set For Big Meet

Seven Races Daily on Half-Mile Track.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., July 26.—The Bel Air race track, refurbished and sleek, opens tomorrow for the 10-day race meeting of the Harford Fair Association.

Limit fields for all opening day races were indicated by the long lines before the entry clerks today.

Post time for the first race each day will be 2 p. m. There will be seven flat races daily and steeplechases when entries fill.

The daily double will be on the first and second races, with the steeplechase third on the program.

The session closes August 6 with the bangtails moving on to Cumberland, and thence to Marlboro and Timonium.

Stewards for the meet are William Harrtin, representing the State Racing Commission; Marion Staylor, representing the Harford County Association, and Edward J. Brennan, who also will be clerk of the scales and circle judge.

Grimes, Durocher Ejected From Tilt

New York, July 26 (AP).—Manager Burleigh Grimes and Shortstop Leo Durocher, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, as well as a paying customer, were bounced out of today's game with the Chicago Cubs at Ebbets Field, that hot-bed of baseball fervor.

Grimes and Durocher were banned, the Dodger pilot for the fifth time this season, after objecting to a decision by Umpire Ziggy Sears. After their banishment, a light barrage of pop bottles came down onto the field, and one of the "grenade" throwers was escorted outside the park by a special policeman.

Tigers Lift Suspension To Keep Poffenberger

Detroit, July 26 (AP).—The suspension of Cletus Elwood Poffenberger, young right handed pitcher, has been lifted and he will remain with the Detroit Tigers, Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Detroit Baseball Co., announced today.

Poffenberger arrived in Detroit Sunday night after being suspended because he failed to return here immediately after being ordered to by Manager Cochrane. The Tiger manager charged laxity in fielding to the young pitcher in ordering him home.

Sandlot Pickups

More than 1,000 peewee, insect, midget and junior baseball players, members of about 60 local and suburban teams have officially registered for the 1938 All-Washington all-star selections with Columbia Athletic League headquarters . . . Those picked to represent Washington in the annual all-star battles will be officially titled "City All-Stars" . . . They will be given a victory rally and sent to Griffith Stadium to play the all-stars from Philadelphia and Baltimore in the peewee, insect, midget nad junior classes.

• • • •

A triple play was registered in sandlot circles last Sunday, the second one of the season to come to our attention . . . It occurred in the fifth inning of the Four Corners-Southern Maryland Democrats tussle, in which the latter was defeated, 4-3, in a nip-and-tuck engagement . . . In the fifth frame the Democrats had three men on the bases . . . The batter slashed a hard-hit ball directly to Billy Morell, Four Corners' hurler, who threw to Catcher Jim Donnelly, forcing the runner from third . . . Donnelly then whipped the ball to First Baseban Rufus Rutherford ahead of the runner . . . While all this was going on, the runer who had previously occupied second base was attempting to race for home, but a throw from Rutherford back to Donnelly caught the runner flat-footed.

• • • •

Perfect punching: . . . Jack Jones, of the District Plumbers, whacked out four hits in four times at bat to drive across four runs as his teammates went on to win by the score of 8-7 over the Read's Pharmacy nine . . . It was a National City League B engagement and sent his chums into a first-place tie with Anacostia Motors for the league lead . . . Impressive record: . . . The Takoma Athletic Club Nine have won 15 games in 19 starts and the boys will tell you that most of the credit is due the battery combination of Dick Willy and Lawrence Pope . . . His last time out, Willy gave up five hits, struck out seven and walked only two . . . Pope contributed to the cause by slamming a homer in the first inning with the bases loaded . . . Of course they won the game . . . The score was 10-3 over The Post Circulators . . . John Clements turned in a great mound exhibition for the Capitol Heights Nine as he set the Trojans down, 7-0, with two tainted hits, Sunday . . .

Columbus Buys Hurler.

Columbus, Ohio, July 26 (AP).—The Columbus American Association Baseball Club today purchased Pitcher James Tompkins, a right-hander, from Greensburg of the Penn State League for an undisclosed sum.

Steve Casey Accepts Bout

Winner of Thursday's Mat Event Meets Him.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Casey, world's wrestling champion of Boston, South Orchard, Me.; Hoboken, and a small strip of ice at the South Pole claimed for the United States by Admiral Byrd, last night accepted terms for a bout here next week against the winner of tomorrow night's argument between Cliff Olson and Ernie Dusek.

And Mr. Joe Turner, who promotes the shows as much for his own entertainment as much as anybody else's, was beside himself with glee. Mr. Morgenthau couldn't have been happier with a balanced budget. In Turners opinion, Casey's acceptance guarantees two good shows in succession for his customers.

"Those two (Olson and Dusek) will work now," he said, with an expectant gleam shining through his spectacles. They'll really go to town with a chance at Casey hanging in the balance. You know, neither one cares a great deal for him. They share the opinion that O'Mahoney and Casey are a couple of second-raters and think they can pin 'em with no trouble. Ernie proved his case against O'Mahoney a couple of weeks ago, at least, and I wouldn't be surprised if he didn't do the same against Casey.

"And if it's Olson who gets the chance at Casey he'll do as well as Ernie. Cliff knows what it's all about, and he's a powerful man. Whichever one gets the bout will make it unpleasant for the Irishman."

The supporting card for tomorrow night's show, which will be held indoors at the Arena, finds some familiar figures listed. Outstanding among them is Paul Boesch, of California, who made a smash hit in winning the "battle royal" last week. Boesch tackles Wally Dusek, one of the wide-spread Dusek tribe. Still another Dusek, Emil, meets Ed Meske.

Johnsen-Fishback Win Doubles Crown.

Forest Hills, N. Y., July 26 (U.P.). David Johnsen, of Washington, D. C., teamed with Joey Fishbach, of New York, to win the Eastern Junior doubles tennis title at the West Side Tennis Club today.

Johnsen and Fishbach defeated Billy Gillespie and Don Buffington, of Atlanta, Ga., 6—3, 6—4, 6—2, in the titular final. Gillespie previously had advanced to the singles final by beating Bill Umstaedter, of Millburn, N. J., 6—1, 8—10, 7—5.. He will meet Fishbach in the final tomorrow.

Wise Barrister Wins Arlington Park Race

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Wise Barrister, of the Blue Ridge Farm Stable, galloped home four lengths ahead of John Marsch's favored Kings Blue today to win the seven-furlong Bay Shore Purse at Arlington Park. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Dorothy Rock was third.

Public Links Play Today

105 Expected To Compete In Tourney

72-Hole Battle Opens on Revised East Potomac; 5 Are Co-Favorites.

The 72-hole battle for the city public links campionship and the Harding Cup team trials begin today over the revised East Potomac layout with a near-record field of 105 expected to compete.

Nearly half the field played practice rounds over the downtown public links course yesterday, but none was able to equal par figures of 72. The course now measures 6,700 yards, and has been tightened by out-of-bounds stakes and new traps.

Favored players include five members of previous Harding Cup teams, the four men that represent the city in the National Public Links play. They are Bradley Burrows, Jimmy Gipe, Pat Axtell, Bobby Burton and Andy Oliveri.

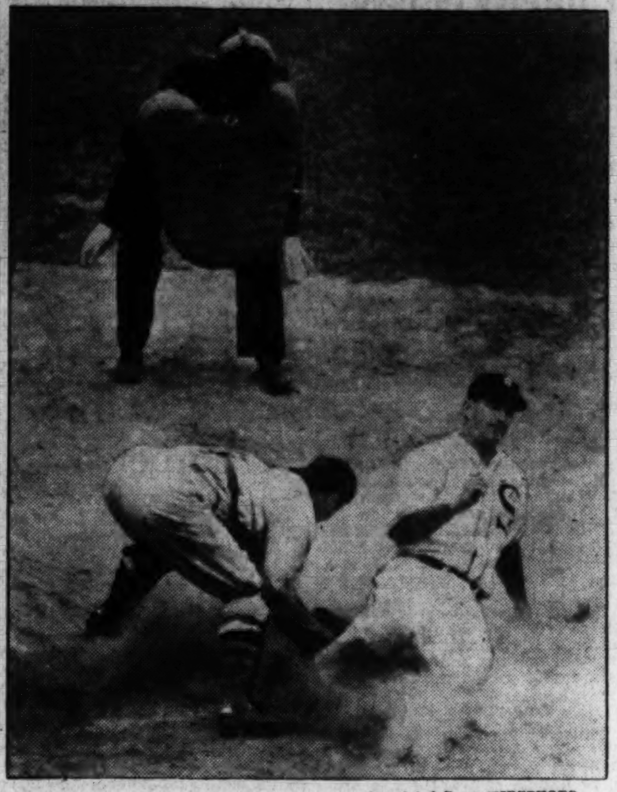
A committee of Dave Herman, local representative of the U. S. G. A., Tommy Doerer, jr., course manager, and Professional Mel Shorey will head the event. Thirty-six holes are on tap today and tomorrow.

Appling Scores for Chisox



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Luke Appling, White Sox shortstop, slides into home plate to score in the fourth inning of yesterday's game with Boston. Catcher DeSautels attempts to make the out and Umpire Geisel calls the play. Appling's run tied the score, 1 to 1, but Chicago went on to tally eight more runs and win, 9 to 1.

Reds Down Bees by 6-2

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 26.—Paul Derringer kept the Bees away from first base for six and two-thirds innings today while pitching a five-hitter that gave his Cincinnati Reds a 6-2 victory in the series opener.

With two out in the seventh, Debs Garms lashed out a long drive to center. He made second on the blow, but First Baseman Frank McCormick claimed that Garms had failed to touch first. After the baseman went through the motions of making the putout, he was upheld by Umpire Barr.

The Bees tallied twice in the eighth on four successive singles, but the Reds had clinched the game in the third when Derringer knocked out the first homer since he broke in with the Cardinals in 1931 and Wally Berger connected for his eleventh circuit hit of the season with a mate aboard.

Golf Financing Plan Forecast

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Tom Hudgins, Richmond golf professional, said today he would present at the organization meeting of the golf pros in Virginia at Newport News August 5 a plan for financing the annual State Open tournament.

The plan calls for a series of State-wide "ringer" tournaments to be conducted individually by the various clubs in the State. Each club, under the plan, would conduct such a tourney, beginning immediately after the State Open and continuing until the early part of the following summer.

Ninety per cent of the entrance fees would go toward the State Open fund and the remaining 10 per cent prizes for winners of the several tournaments.

Sox Swamp Boston, 9-1

Lyons Tight in Pinches Steinbacher Homers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—Chicago's White Sox opened their home stand today by belting Fritz Ostermueller and Lee Rogers for 14 hits and a 9 to 1 victory over the third-place Boston Red Sox.

The defeat dropped the Red Sox two and one-half games behind the second place Cleveland Indians who defeated Philadelphia.

Ted Lyons, veteran Chicago right-hander, gave Boston 10 hits, but was effective with men on bases in scoring his fifth victory of the season. Rip Radcliff and Luke Appling paced the White Sox attack with three hits each and Hank Steinbacher contributed a homer, his fourth of the season, and a double. Joe Vosmik, with a double and a single, topped the Red Sox hitters.

Feller Tops Macks by 4-2

Youngster Gives 7 Hits, Strikes Out 10 Men.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 26.—Bob Feller's father, William, came from Iowa today and watched his 19-year-old son regain control to turn in his eleventh win of the season for Cleveland against five defeats. Feller granted seven hits but walked only three in his 4-2 victory over Philadelphia.

The Macks gained a two-run lead, scoring in the second on a walk, a single and a double steal which landed Lodigiani over the home plate, and in the fourth on two walks, a wild pitch and a balk.

Then Feller settled down, winding up with ten strikeouts and retiring 12 men in order as Earl Averill and Jeff Heath connected for home runs off George Caster to put Cleveland ahead. Rollie Hemsley, Tribe catcher, was injured on his right foot by a wild pitch and was sent to a hospital to determine if there is a broken bone in his instep.

Cubs Score On Wild Pitch

In the first place the Chicago Cubs, making their local bow under Gabby Hartnett's leadership, beat the Dodgers, 10-8. In the second place Dodger Manager Burleigh Grimes and Dodger Captain Leo Durocher were thrown out of the game, Grimes for the fifth time this season. In the third place, the double ejection brought down a shower of pop bottles, which wound up with one of the tossers being escorted out of the park by a special policeman.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

John Kelly Lewis was the bright star of the Nats at Detroit yesterday and makes an appreciable gain in the race for the Man of the Month prize.

To Lewis, four points, because with his two-bagger and single he drove in three of the Nats' five runs.

To Rick Ferrell, three points, because he drove in the tying run with a single in the fourth inning and launched another run with a single in the sixth.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he made three of the Nats' hits, figured in one run and played a smashing game in the field.

To Buddy Myer, one point, because despite the fact he went hitless, he was a powerful asset to the Nats, cutting off the potential winning run in the seventh by starting a spectacular double play on a hard chance off Gehringer's bat.

Prince Georges Heads Pass 2 Project Plans

Approve Construction of County Building, Courthouse Additions.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday approved tentative plans for spending $350,000 for additions to the courthouse and construction of a county building at Hyattsville and voted to apply for a $157,500 PWA grant to finance 45 per cent of the cost of the proposed projects.

Recommendation for the building program was submitted by Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, member of the board and chairman of a committee named to draw up plans. The other members of the committee are Irving C. Root, engineer for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, and Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools.

Capt. Cockey said present plans call for the expenditure of $150,000 for improvements to the old courthouse at Upper Marlboro and $150,000 for construction of the county building to serve the metropolitan area. The remaining $50,000 would be used as a differential fund to take care of extra costs on both projects.

A tract of land known as the Rodgers' estate, at the intersection of Rhode Island and Johnson avenues in Hyattsville, is favored as the site for the county building, which would house one of the two county police stations as well as other offices. This tract is owned by the State Roads Commission.

From Carroll Estate.

The land on which the additions to the courthouse would be built is owned by the Archdiocese of Baltimore, and is part of the estate of John Carroll, first Catholic bishop in America.

Negotiations for purchase of both these tracts will be carried on by a committee consisting of Commissioner Joseph H. Blandford, M. Hampton Magruder and Capt. Cockey.

The county's share of the cost of the proposed building program, which also includes widening the street in front of the courthouse, would be raised through a bond issue, Capt. Cockey said. Authority for floating such an issue was granted by the State Legislature in an enabling act passed in 1935.

Sasscer Is Present.

The commissioners' meeting yestreday was attended by many county officials, including most of those who have offices in the present courthouse.

Among those present were Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the State Senate and county Democratic leader; Joseph C. Mattingly, of the Circuit Court; T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission; Frank Smith, member of the Park and Planning Commission; Ogle Marbury, counsel to the county commissioners; Ernest Smith, county treasurer; Thomas Baxter, supervisor of assessments; James S. Heal, clerk to the commissioners; W. T. Davis, registrar of wills; George B. Merrick, police court judge and W. R. C. Connick, clerk to the police commissioners.

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday announced award of scholarships to Buddy Rector, of Upper Marlboro and Henry Earp, jr., of Laurel.

Rector, a graduate of the Marlboro elementary school, was adjudged winner of a four-year scholarship to Charlotte Hall Preparatory School, carrying board and tuition. He was selected on the basis of a competitive examination over six other candidates.

Earp won a four-year scholarship, covering board and tuition, to Washington College in a competitive examination given to seven aspirants. Earp was graduated in June from the Laurel High School.

Target Firing Main Work of First Infantry

By Phillip J. Austensen.

A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 26.—Target practice continued the main order of business today at the encampment of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, now in its second week here.

The regiment is anxious to regain its place as the ace shooting regiment of the National Guard. It was first in 1935 and second in 1936 and 1937.

Regimental and batallion staffs were engaged all day in planning the "battle of the century" which will be the culmination of maneuvers Thursday night and Friday in which the two battalions will be pitted against each other with practically no interference by regimental staff.

Md. and Pa. to Be at War.

The situation briefly has been announced as follows: Maryland and Pennsylvania will have declared war at noon Thursday. The First Battalion, commanded by Maj. Winfield B. Harward, will form the advance guard of the Maryland Army which is being moblized at Frederick. The battalion theoretically has been taken to Hagerstown in trucks and is advancing toward Waynesboro, where the Third Battalion, has been moved as advance guard of the Pennsylvania Army, which is mobilizing at Gettysburg.

The two battalions will advance toward each other maintaining scouting patrols and outposts and will bivouac for the night. Night scouting parties will endeavor to capture prisoners for information.

Majors in Full Control.

The majors commanding will have entire control of their battalions during the maneuver. The Second Battalion, under Maj. Harry E. Flook, will be held in reserve and thrown into action on the side of the battalion which seems to be getting the worst of the battle early Friday.

Each battalion will have machine gun and howitzer platoons and air squadron co-operating theoretically, and each will be required to take precautions against air attacks.

Chaplain Frederick C. Reynolds, a former Washington pastor, will be given a mock court-martial tomorrow by officers of the Second Battalion who claim that his close decision in umpiring their softball game with officers of the First Battalion was prejudicial to the good order of the regiment. The First Battalion officers won 9 to 8, because of the decision.

To Start Fingerprinting.

Fingerprinting of the 1,041 men and 65 officers of the regiment as part of the test mobilization being carried on by the War Department will begin tomorrow under direction of Lieut. Col. John M. Leonard, senior Regular Army instructor, aided by Lieut. Col. Charles B. Reitz, Lieuts. R. R. Bresler and P. Thomas, and a crew of enlisted men.

Col. Jack Jewett, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Jewett, of Hagerstown, were guests of Gen. Markey last night. Col. Jewett trained the present Chinese air forces in China for three years and returned to this country about 18 months ago to enter commercial aviation.

$6,000 Allowed In Alexandria Condemnation

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 3767
Delivery Service, phone Alex 1400.

A condemnation jury in the corportion court yesterday awarded Carl E. Brooks and his wife, Mrs. Bessie Brooks, $6,000, for the piece of property formerly known as the North Rosemont Station, and which is needed by the City of Alexandria in establishing a right of way through Washington avenue. Brooks had asked $10,000 for the property.

Acting City Manager Carl L. Budwesky, who is also city attorney, will report this action to the council in September.

The condemnation jury included William H. F. Brooke, R. L. Kane, Robert W. Schneider, Harry E. Hinken, and Llewellyn F. Dyson. Attorney Frederick L. Fynn represented Mr. and Mrs. Brooks.

Although many previous efforts had been made by the city attorney to secure another business site in the neighborhood for Brooks, no agreement could be reached, as nearby property owners objected to re-location of the store.

R. B. Hicks, teacher of the adult Bible class of the Del Ray Baptist Church, will be the speaker at the meeting next Sunday of the Men's Federation of Bible Classes of Alexandria, to be held at 9:30 a. m. at the First Baptist Church, 200 block of South Washington street.

Sergt John M. Burroughs and Private Newman B. Dudrow, of the Alexandria Light Infantry, have been chosen in elimination matches to represent the local company on the Virginia National Guard rifle team competing in the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August and Septembtr.

Capt. W. Cameron Roberts of the local company, and Sergt. Burton E. Archer, have been eliminated this year, as they have been winners for the last three consecutive years.

Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey, president of the local Daughters of the Confederacy Chapter, has called a meeting of that group for 8 p. m. tonight in Lee Camp Hall, when plans for the entertainment by the local organization of the State convention of the Virginia Division, U. D. C., in October will be discssed.

James H. Brown has recently been named manager of the Alexandria branch of the American Agricultural Co., succeeding James W. Pierce, who has been transferred to Baltimore, after six years with the local branch.

Steel Reports Quarter Loss, July Upturn

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—The United States Steel Corporation, the leading producer in one of the Nation's basic industries, reported today for the three months ended June 30 the largest deficit it has shown for a comparable period since 1933, but sounded a cheerful note by calling attention to a recent upturn in steel business.

Apparently taking the July improvement in new orders as a guide, rather than the second quarter loss, the directors decided to dip into cash reserves to maintain the regular quarterly payment of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock.

In announcing the earnings figures and dividend action, E. R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board, passed without comment the question of a possible reduction in wage rates, rated by some Wall Streeters as more important than the summer gain in business as a determining factor in profit prospects for the steel industry in the nearby future.

Deficit Is $5,010,426.

The deficit totaled $5,010,426, compared with a loss of $1,291,000 in the first three months of the year and net income of $36,173,682 in the June quarter last year.

The six months deficit of $6,302,577 contrasted with net income of $64,735,215 in the first half of 1937, when the profit was equal to $5.98 a share on the common stock.

Mainly accounting for the loss, it appeared, was a lower rate of production, for the cut in finished steel prices and changes in the basing point system of pricing were not effective until June 25, near the close of the bookkeeping period covered by the operating figures.

Shipments in the second quarter, the steel corporation reported, were at the rate of 32 per cent of capacity compared with 35.3 in the preceding quarter. For the first six months shipments averaged 33.6 against 85.2 in the corresponding 1937 months, when steel production touched the peak of the 1932-37 recovery.

July Improvement.

Noting the further recession in demand in the spring months, the youthful chairman, who took over the financial reins of the giant corporation a few months ago, added:

"Since the middle of July, however, there has been an improving demand for steel products as evidenced both by incoming orders received and the increased production of the steel industry."

Payment of the regular preferred dividend will cost the corporation $6,304,919, making a total deficit of $18,912,415 provided from undivided surplus to pay the total deficit in the first half of the year, according to its income account.

Net working assest, however, increased to $442,174,191 compared with $372,388,530 at the close of 1937. The increase in working assets was attributed to proceeds of the $100,000,000 in debentures offered publicly last month. The asset total was before deduction for the dividend declared today but after allowing for $50,000,000 in bank loans repaid out of cash from the bond sale.

Structural Steel Orders Year's Top

New York, July 26 (AP).—New orders booked by the structural steel fabricating industry in June were the largest for any month this year, amounting to 97,546 tons, compared with 77,499 tons in May and 175,552 tons the corresponding month last year, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported today.

The increase in business contained none of the new orders expected from the Government's work-relief program.

Sales of U. S. Cotton 15% Below Average

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Agricultural economics estimated yesterday that world consumption of American cotton during the marketing year ending July 31 would be 11,100,000 bales.

This total, it added, would be 2,000,000 bales less than in the previous season, and 15 per cent less than the average for the last five years.

'Banking' Sees A Short Boom

New York, July 26 (AP).—"The business situation contains the elements of a short boom," said Banking today in its monthly survey. The magazine, official publication of the American Bankers Association, held "the most important single factor is the belief shared by many millions of persons that inflation in some form will be very hard to avoid."

"One serious damper," it continued, "is uncertainty connected with the elections this fall and the clew it will furnish as to the trend of public opinion regarding private enterprise. Another is continued instability abroad.

"Coupled with a fair degree of confidence in the outlook for the rest of the year is a persistent feeling of anxiety which has come to be a familiar paradox in American business thinking. The prospect of another huge national deficit and the abandonment of all pretense at balancing the budget have struck a decidedly sour note and strengthened the case of those who feel that honest, sound recovery is a long way off."

$100,000,000 Bills 2.6 Times Subscribed

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated July 27 and to mature October 26, 1938, which were offered on July 22, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total applied for was $264,955,000 and the total accepted $100,224,000. The average price was 99.985, equivalent to a rate of 0.059 per cent.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, July 26.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended July 23, totaled 38,575. For the same week of last year, total loads were 50,681 and during the previous week of this year the total was 40,119.

Wheat Prices Again Eclipse 5-Year Lows

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—For the second time in 48 hours, the Chicago wheat market today fell under five-year low records here. The newest tumble amounted to about a cent a bushel, with rallies following that partly overcame the losses. Increased selling because of new crop movement facilitated the price downturn, but then purchase orders developed better volume.

A report that much of the late wheat in spring crop areas both sides of the Canadian boundary would be subjected to probable black rust and grasshopper damage was responsible for a good deal of buying as the day drew to an end.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛-½ cent lower compared with yesterday's finish; September, 67⅝-67¾; December, 69⅝-69¾. Corn ¾ off to ½ up; September, 57⅛-57¼; December, 55⅜-55½. Oats unchanged to ⅜ down, rye showing ⅜-⅞ drop, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents setback.

Nat'l Steel to Spend $5,000,000 on Plants

Pittsburgh, July 26.—National Steel Corporation announced today that $5,000,000 will be spent on plants of the Weirton Steel Co. at Weirton, W. Va., in further diversification of products.

The improvements will provide production facilities for a number of new products, which will include an increased range of structural shapes, sections for carbuilding and shipbuilding, a full line of steel piling and other special sections. The new equipment also will roll all sections of rails, including the 152-pound section, now the heaviest used by the railroads of the country.

Automobile Annual.

New York, July 26.—Nearly 30,000,000 motor vehicles running on the 3,000,000 miles of highways in the United States provide a livelihood for 6,000,000 persons. These workers are employed in manufacturing, selling and servicing passenger cars and trucks, building roads and transporting people and goods, it is shown by "Automobile Facts and Figures" for 1938, issued today by the Automobile Manufacturers Association.

Stocks Rest After Recent Strong Advance But Trading Slackens on Declines.

New York, July 26.—The stock market underwent one of its normal siestas today. Prices were reactionary from the beginning and while there were short periods during which some flashes of strength were displayed, the close was lower by 0.41 point on the average and trading for the session dwindled down to only 1,252,470 shares. These periods of rest have been seen several times since the current rise started on June 20 and none as yet has done anything to interfere with the prevailing optimism.

Contributing to the irregularity and dullness today was the disposition of the Street to await the outcome of the meeting of United States Steel directors after the close.

Steel again closed lower for the day, dropping 1¼, while the preferred on which the dividend was later voted, gained a point. The steels generally were called upon to absorb considerable profit-taking, Bethlehem and National dropping a point and Republic a fraction.

Following the steel meeting there was a rally in the common on the West Coast markets, indicating the Street tomorrow will place a favorable interpretation on the action. It was generally known that the deficit for the second quarter would exceed that for the first quarter.

More favorable than the earnings figures, however, was the comment of the chairman, who said that steel demand had improved since the middle of the current month, and this, coupled with the decision of directors to maintain the payment on the preferred, was seen as indicating hopefulness and optimism for the future.

Tinplate Orders Rise.

From unofficial but reliable channels it was learned that the upturn in orders for the corporation and the industry includes tinplate in substantial amounts. Buyers of this product had been dilatory in making commitments for the reason that this was the only important line which was not affected by the price cuts made last month.

Trading today was featured by a few of the lower-priced issues coming to the fore. Commercial Solvents and Bendix were among them, each making a new high for the year and closing with plus signs. Other active issues in the lower brackets included Studebaker, radio, Packard and Curtiss Wright. General Motors, the day's most active stock, was down a fraction and Chrysler gave up 2¼.

In most cases the losses of the speculative leaders were held to fractions, but losses of around one to 2 points were sustained by Allied Chemical, Anaconda, du Pont, Great Northern preferred, Nickel, Pennsylvania, Sears Roebuck, Union Pacifice and Westinghouse. Pressing on the rails were reports of individual roads which showed decreased car loadings, reflecting to some extent the interruption caused to business by the heavy rains of last week. Both of the Atchison issues showed small declines.

The wheat market furnished a sensation while securities were dull. Again the Chicago prices dipped to new five-year lows. Selling came with the increased movement of the new crop but there was a partial recovery later on reports the spring crop areas . . . areas on both sides of the Canadian border will be subject to probable black rust and grasshopper damage. The close was off ⅛ to ½ cent. Cotton futures declined 7 to 10 points.

High grade listed bonds were firm in a quiet session today, but among the speculative bonds the main trend was toward lower levels. Stock market influences were apparent among the cheaper carrier obligations and only a few laggards that were not quoted for some days moved upward against the trend, in recognition of recent advances. Most special groups tended to drift downward. Foreign dollar issues remained quiet and uncertain. Turnover in all bonds was $7,150,000.

United States Treasury issues showed gains of 1-32 to 4-32 of a point in dull trading. Most guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations likewise were firm. In counter trading a good demand again was noted for short-term Treasury bills and notes. Telephone bonds held their ground in the corporate divisions, and most highly rated utility operating bonds also were steady, although Commonwealth Edison 3½s fell nearly 2 points on news of fresh financing. Best rail and industrial loans were maintained.

Only mild profit-taking appeared among the secondary railroad liens, as the equities market drifted lower. New York Central and Nickel Plate bonds were affected more than others. A few issues remained in demand, and the gains of inactive bonds spread quite a few gains among the losses. Rail and utility holding issues were dull, but communications bonds improved. Commodity bonds, motion picture issues and other special groups were dull.

Japanese bonds were irregular, with the latest reports of Russo-Japanese military clashes of no great importance, marketwise. Italian bonds and the defaulted German issues also were uncertain. Argentine and Australian bonds dipped slightly, but the Canadian and Scandinavian sections of the high-grade group were firm. Latin American default bonds were quiet and steady.

SecondQuarter Earnings 43% Under YearAgo

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—Second quarter earnings of the first 101 companies to issue statements were 43 per cent less than profits in the comparable 1937 period, a compilation by the Associated Press showed today. Net income of this representative group totaled $88,400,000 during the three months ended June 30, against $156,100,000 a year ago.

Earnings during the first six months were $187,400,000 for these companies, a 39 per cent decline from comparable figures last year.

Eliminating American Telephone & Telegraph Co. profits from the total—accounting as they do for one-third of the net—widens the decline from last year: Earnings of 100 corporations slumping 54 per cent in the second quarter, 49 per cent in the first half.

No comparison was made with the March 31 period, since there is normally a substantial seasonal gain between the first and second quarters.

Pennsylvania R. R.

Philadelphia, July 26.—For the first half year the Pennsylvania Railroad reports net railway operating income of $18,934,624, a drop of $18,660,926 from the first six months of last year. June net operating income was $5,046,096, or $1,488,056 less than June 1937.

Baltimore & Ohio.

Baltimore, July 26.—Net operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the first half of the year was $2,514,320, a decrease of $11,249,540 when compared with the first six months of last year. June net operating income was $1,381,337, or $638,281 less than June 1937.

New York Central.

New York, July 26 (AP).—New York Central Railroad today reported net operating income for June of $922,244, compared with $1,229,247 in the comparable 1937 month. For the first six months of the year net operating income totaled $108,187, against $22,575,194 in the like 1937 period.

Tide Water Oil.

Tide Water Associated Oil Co. reported today consolidated net income of $2,742,441 for the quarter ended June 30, equal to 34 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with $3,250,264, or 42 cents a share, in the March, 1938, quarter and $4,368,398 or 60 cents a share, in the same quarter last year.

General Mills.

General Mills, Inc., owners of flour mills, grain elevators, warehouses and operaators of 107 retail stores, chiefly in New England, Minesota, Ohio, Florida today reported consolidated net earnings for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1938, of $4,110,631, equivalent to $4.17 per common share after preferred requirements, compared with $4,303,389 or $4.46 a share for the previous 12 months. Donald D. Davis, president, said General Mills, Inc., was one of 18 companies with stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange on which regular dividends have been earned and paid without reduction since 1929.

Curtis Publishing.

Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia, for the six months ended June 30, reported net income of $1,258,706 after charges and taxes, equal to $1.46 a share on the $7 cumulative preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends. This compares with $3,482,347, equal after six months' preferred dividend requirements to 25 cents a common share in the like 1937 period.

Aircraft Exports 205% Over Year Ago

The Commerce Department said yesterday that June exports of aeronautic products totaled $7,952,932—205 per cent above June, 1937. Irving H. Taylor, of the automotive-aeronautics trade division, said the principal purchasers were Argentina, China and Japan.

In the first half of 1938 aeronautic exports were valued at $37,121,659, 128 per cent greater than the first half of last year. The 1938 total includes 427 aircraft valued at $21,055,848, compared with 287 worth $8,945,241 in the corresponding period of 1937.

Cotton Lower; December 8.75

New York, July 26 (AP).—Cotton declined further today under tired, long liquidation owing to an easier stock market and the forecast for clearing weather in the eastern cotton belt. December eased from 8.88 to 8.71 and closed at 8.75, with final prices 7 to 10 points net lower.

The market opened 2 to 4 points higher in response to steadier Liverpool cables and reports of further showers in the cotton belt. The weather feature, however, failed to attract buying and there was more disposition to sell on the outlook for more settled conditions. Wall Street liquidation accompanied a reaction in securities and other selling came from domestic and foreign sources. A late partial recovery reflected a little covering.

Dodd to Reply To Smith Radio Address Friday

Representative Howard W. Smith and William E. Dodd, jr., now heading down the homestretch in a Congressional race that has attracted national attention, are going to have a debate, after all. It will take place Friday night over Station WJSV.

Representative Smith, who has represented Virginia's Eighth District in the House for eight years, arranged to talk over the station from 7:30 to 8 o'clock that night. It will be his first major speech of the campaign.

When Dodd's campaign managers heard about this, they immediately arranged to have their candidate speak for 15 minutes, beginning at 9:30 p. m., an hour and a half after Smith has finished. While Smith is talking, Dodd will be in a Washington hotel room, taking notes and preparing his reply.

Smith Declined Debate.

The 32-year-old Dodd, who has made the New Deal and support of President Roosevelt an issue, recently challenged the 55-year-old Smith to a debate, but the latter declined, saying:

"Frankly, your public utterances, relative to your conception of government, are so divergent from our American constitutional form that I would not offend the intelligence of a Virginia audience by debating them with you."

Smith said he proposed to "continue to be a Congressman," while "you propose to be automaton."

Club Asks Spending Curb.

Meanwhile, the Young Democratic Club of Fairfax Conty, Va., last night adopted a resolution condemning excessive campaign expenditures. The resolution ask that the Virginia primary spending law be strictly enforced.

Another resolution openly condemned press statements by Dodd claiming support of "a large group of prominent citizens," including Mrs. St. George Tucker, of Culpepper, identified as secretary-treasurer of the Young Democratic Clubs of the Eighth District, and Rosser Brockman, identified as president of the Orange County Democratic Clubs.

The club pointed out that neither of the persons referred to holds such office.

A third resolution was directed at a report of the Eighth District Young Democratic Convention, appearing in several of the Washington newspapers, concerning an address supposed to be made by Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan. The statement is called "misleading and erroneous," as Keenan, the resolution said, had never been invited by the officials to address the convention, and he had never been told not to appear.

THE INSULT

Bob Burns

Says—

Tolerance is one of the finest traits a man can have but it jest seems like when a fella has it, everybody takes advantage of it and imposes on him until he finally loses it.

I knew an old fella down home that I believe was one of the most tolerant men in the world. When he told me he was in for forgery, I says, "well, you can't write, can you?" And he says, "No, I can't." I says "Well, you couldn't be guilty of forgery!" He says, "No, I know that—sometimes I think I had a bum lawyer!"

AND AFTER I MADE INDIAN TALK TO HER FOR FIVE MINUTES, SHE SPOKE TO ME IN PERFECT ENGLISH, NED
WATCH YOUR STEP, BUD-EVERY TIME YOU TALK TO HER. THOSE BIG YOUNG BUCKS LOOK LIKE THEY WANTED TO EAT YOU I'LL FOOL 'EM-I'LL HIDE THE MUSTARD!
BESIDES, WE'VE GOT TO GET WORD TO OUR FOLKS THAT WERE AT THIS INDIAN VILLAGE
MAYBE THE CHIEF'S SON, THE ONE WHO GOES TO COLLEGE, CAN HELP US DO THAT WHEN HE GETS BACK FROM HUNTING
WONDER WHAT HE LOOKS LIKE-BUD-DID YOU HEAR THAT NOISE?
IF WE WEREN'T UP IN THE WOODS, I'D SAY IT WAS SOMEONE KICKING A FOOTBALL!

Capacity House Greets Opening Of New Theater

Elissa Landi Is the Star of Inaugural Bill at The Olney.

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE LADY HAS A HEART." Stephen Cochran presents Edward Roberts' English adaptation of Ladislaus Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy, in three acts and four scenes. Directed by George Vivian; settings by Charles Squires. At the Olney Theater.

THE CAST

Klari	Jacqueline Brundage
Jean	Leslie Denison
Countess Mariassy	Zoyla Talma
Countess Katinka	Elissa Landi
Count Albert Mariassy	Gordon Richards
Count Gyorgy	Howard Ferguson
Radio Announcer	Norman Stuart
Ilonka	Elizabeth Ray Williams
Ferencz	Robert Lynn

Set in a picturesque grove of magnificent old oak trees, with spacious driveways leading to its entrance and abundant space for parking cars, Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater last night opened its initial season as "The South's first professional summer playhouse" to an overflow audience, with Elissa Landi in Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy, "The Lady Has a Heart."

Last night's inaugural was in every respect an auspicious occasion, marking the successful culmination of long and carefully laid plans by Impresario Cochran. The festivities were begun as early as 6:30 by the signing of the memorial oak that grows through the lobby of the Olney by Elissa Landi, star of its first attraction, who was to score later in the first performance in what will speedily be recognized as the most commodious and most beautifully located hot-weather home of the drama anywhere within a wide radius of the National Capital.

First-night patrons thronged the grounds in increasing numbers from 6:30 on, inspecting the rustic theater and congratulating Mr. Cochran upon his perspicacity in having chosen such an ideal site for his new footlight venture. They found the one-floor theater not quite completed to the last detail, but a well-seated and comfortable structure capable of seating approximately 450 people; the stage of sufficient dimensions to accommodate satisfactorily any but the most cumbersome plays.

Play Was Filmed.

"The Lady Has a Heart," the initial bill, may be most readily identified in the theatergoing mind as the comedy upon which the screen play of "The Baroness and the Butler" was based. It relates the interesting and mildly satiric story of the serving man in the home of the prime minister, who himself entered politics in opposition to the Conservative Party, of which his master was head, only to find himself unexpectedly elected to the House of Deputies while still retaining his post as valet to the dignitary whose government he was destined eventually to overthrow.

A romantic, as well as political, aspect is lent the play by the class consciousness of the Premier's daughter, who perceives in the surprisingly well-versed butler a more potent figure than the ineffectual political nonentity who is her husband. The four scenes of the three acts are uniformly sound in their exposition of the socialist-conservative conflict and at times are briskly amusing in the deft turning of phrases between the opposing parties, both political and romantic.

The piece was run off last evening with remarkable smoothness for a first night, although the between-scenes wait in the second act seemed a trifle long and it was evident, now and again, that a little longer association will redound to the benefit of both cast and comedy.

The roles which gave the film play its name are skillfully portrayed by Elissa Landi and Leslie Denison, both of whom bring a degree of polish and finesse to characters that could not be found outside of the aristocracy of any country. Miss Landi read her vituperative speeches with great warmth and imbued her more generous momentts with appealing gentleness and charm. Mr. Denison contrived to be both butler and legislator with equal effectiveness, combining frigid austerity with a lively controversial spirit as the requirements of the duality of his role demanded.

Stars Capably Supported.

Gordon Richards and Zoyla Talma provided a substantial background for the romance and the comedy, as the Count and Countess Mariassy, and Howard Ferguson left no doubt as to where the superiority lay in the political arena as between himself and the glorified butler, who bested him romantically as well as in the halls of Parliament.

The costumes and settings were of metropolitan midseason beauty and tastefulness and about the whole proceedings there hovered an air of professionalism quite comparable to that of any "first night."

The Olney is not in any sense a "barn theater," although it is of simple and unembellished design and as yet unpainted and, as already intimated, uncompleted in its minor details. Last night's capacity audience accepted it as a valuable and a welcome addition to Washington's sources of summer entertainment. With the stars already announced, and those yet to be articled, it would make history in a distinctly new field of local endeavor during the "straw hat" season—and beyond.

Baltimore's Vice Study a Failure, Grand Jury Says

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—Baltimore's vice quiz fizzled out today with the report of the grand jury its probe had been "100 per cent nonproductive."

"Rumors, reports, hints, tips, intimations, innuendoes and the like do not constitute evidence," the jury report said and added it was impossible to bring indictments "unless something substantial is submitted to the grand jury than the mere recounting of hectic tours of so-called hot spots of Baltimore by nonresidents whose identity has never been revealed to the grand jury."

The grand jury investigation was begun after a lengthy report was made by the citizens committee, headed by Dr. J. M. T. Finney.

'Johnson Grass' That Texas Victor Referred to Is Really Sorghum Halepense—Fine for Cattle but a Curse to Crops.

Its Sunday name is Sorghum halepense, but since the more commonplace "Johnson grass" proved good enough to help W. Lee O'Daniel win the recent Democratic Gubernatorial primary in Texas, let's call it that.

"And Southern farmers who've seen their cotton and other crops ruined by the weed can think of less polite names than that," said L. W. Kephart, senior agronomist in the Bureau of Plant Industry, division of cereal crops and diseases.

His opinions had been solicited as a result of Columnist Mark Sullivan's reference in The Post yesterday to O'Daniel's slogan "Less Johnson grass and politicians, more smokestacks and business men."

"What Johnson grass is I do not know," the commentator admitted. "I presume it is some vegetable equivalent of the boll weevil, the grasshopper or the Japanese beetle."

A Good Guess.

That was a good guess, said Kephart, who believes the damage wreaked by Johnson grass exceeds the boll weevil's toll. It derives its name from Col. William Johnson, owner of a plantation near Selma, Ala., who paid a visit to Sounth Carolina about 98 years ago.

Some ten years earlier, Gov. Means had introduced into that State a Mediterranean foreigner known to botanists as Sorghum halepense. Col. Johnson was so much taken with the leafy alien that he carried some of its seeds back home with him and sowed them on the rich lowlands of the Alabama River.

There is where the colonel made his mistake, even though he acquired the dubious honor of giving the weed a popular name. (In many parts of South Carolina it is still knows as Means grass).

Jekyll-Hyde Plant.

"It is the Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde of plant life, excellent for forage but deah to cotton and other important farm products," said Kephart.

While the South is the worst affected, Johnson grass occurs as far north as Indiana and Iowa and along the Pacific Coast, up to Oregon and Washington. If you want to see some for yourself there are some bad patches in Petersburg, Va., the nearest the weed has come to Washington.

Obligingly, she drew forth from their filing cabinets one specimen after another of this two-faced weed, relished by cattle and cursed by crop growers. In the matter of physical characteristics, it grows from 3 to 6 feet above the ground and has broad leaves in which the middle vein is thickened and white.

B. & O. to Streamline 'Capitol Limited' Train

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced today the Capitol Limited, an all-pullman train operating between Washington and Chicago, will be streamlined by the Pullman Co.

The new train will be designed along the pattern of other B. & O. streamliners. Royal blue will form the basic color with black and gray trim and gold striping. Delivery of the first unit is expected in the early fall.
